How to win friends and influence peopleofficial

By Nicholas Carroll

AN OFFICIAL directive on how to manipulate foreign visitors to East Pakistan has been prepared by the Pakistani Government and issued. with the classification Secret, to information officials. The document, signed by the Secretary of the Ministry of Information and National Affairs in Islamahad last June, after the lifting of restrictions on foreign visits to East Pakistan, gives detailed guidance on handling foreign VIPs and journalists. A photo copy of the directive has reached The Sunday

Since the army crackdown last March, some eight million people bave fled from East Pakistan into India. On this matter, the directive says: "Above all [foreign VIPs] would be interested in seeing the return of displaced persons and the arrangements made for receiving and rehabilitating them. To that end, they would like to visit two or three of the crowded ones, but the crowde should be arranged. hut the crowds should be ensured hy delaying dispersals rather than faking."

Foreigners who want to check stories they have heard of attempts by the Pakistan Army to eliminate intellectuals, may ask to visit Jagannath Hall and Iqhal Hall at Dacca University to meet intellec-tuals. "We should have no objec-tions," the directive says, "hut only dependable ones may be invited to see them.'

Officials are advised to restrain their hospitality for visitors, " such as British MPs and Congressmen," since over-entertainment would he "incongruous with the present situation in East Pakistan." Neither should them he are constitution. should there be any over-display of military personnel. Security arrangements should be unohiru-other points made in the directive—which it should be noted is not wholly devoted to efforts to influence visitors—include:

 In the course of their visit to various areas [VIPs] should also be encouraged to visit some of the scenes of massacre of non-Bengalis and meet some of the survivors. They should be encouraged to see the refugee camps of Biharis thrown out of Mymensingh and listen to their tales of woe.

• It should be made ahundantly clear to them that while a specific programme has been chalked out for their convenience, they are free to change it and go to what-ever place they wish and meet whom ever they like. They should be encouraged to meet friendly foreigners like those in Chittagong and Sulhet who bave personally experienced the depredations of the

While an effort should he made to avoid their seeing the more heavily damaged portions of places like Khulna, there should be no deliberate ohvious attempt to keep them away.

The Islamahad document provides a policy line for officials to put to visitors. Massacres are to he explained as the outcome of the now-banned Awami League's intolerance rather than to communal strife. It is stressed that Awami League killings started long before the Army's action. The document says briefing should he on certain lines. This is the wording of the instructions:

• The whole problem has arisen from the active encouragement and collusion of the Indians,

• The Awami League won its elections on the mandate of autonomy but that the bard-core Fascist elements later escalated this into UDL

● The return of the displaced persons is heing hampered by Indian propaganda, concentration of troops along the border, Indian promotion of disruptive activities hy secessionists and public declara-tion of the Indian Prime Minister that India will not let the refugees go back to Yahya Khan's East Paikstan, but only to Mujih's Bangla

The section of the directive relating to foreign journalists indicates that they are to he carefully watched though not directly hamp-ered. Their arrival in the East Pakistan capital of Dacca is to be reported "discreetly" hy Pakistan airlines and copies of their dispatches sent to the government information department. The directive goes on: "No restrictions should he imposed on foreign correspondents seeing anyone they like and in no case should people who turn up to see them he turned away or subsequently interrogated in respect of their discussion with foreign correspondents."

Local officials are to be advised how to handle foreign correspondents. "It will be desirable," the directive says, " to keep the foreign correspondents away from the cantonments and contact with army officers."

Two police on gun theft charge

TWO POLICE officers and three civilians were charged in London yesterday with conspiring to defeat the course of justice and with stealing a .38 automatic.

The charges follow police inquiries which included an arrest in Mayfair on Thursday, but it is understood that the arrest was not that of a police officer.

The charges are: 1—on or about September 16, 1971, they conspired to defeat the course of justice; and 2-on March 28, 1969 the theft of a .38 automatic.

No further charges are expected at this stage.

The police officers, both married men, were serving at West End Central police station dur-ing 1969. Neither was attached to the Special Branch.

The charges follow a police operation conducted under an almost unprecedented hlanket of secrecy. It came into the open only after the arrests in Mayfair, London, on Thursday. - -

They later lifted the veil a little more and stated that among a number of people helping inquiries was a police officer.

Checking, in such a situation, is naturally difficult. Because had been expected. Yet Mr Faulknothing is known publicly against a that every one of the 219 must be a guilty man. "I have made no internment order," he said, "without being satisfied on evidence placed before me that the person man, it does not follow that the security forces do not have some clandestine evidence against him. But on the other hand, mucb of the Army and police intelligence is drawn from paid informers, and is therefore intrinsically suspect. Some checks can he made by interviewing men arrested and held with the internees but who were later released. Men inside Crumlin Jail and HMS Maidstone can assess each other's affiliations, because the "Official" and "Provisional" IRA men tend tostick together, ignoring outsiders.

Obviously, even those released are apt to be hiased against the authorities. But estimates of the "hard core" drawn from them agree reasonably well with private estimates given by British Army intelligence officers. From different directions. ferent directions, Army sources and ex-detainees both suggest that the internment list bas been swollen by reference to out-dated and questionable information from the Royal Ulster Constabulary.

It is not easy to be confident about the selectivity of a system with held O'Tuatbail for five weeks without questioning him and which still keeps Fleming inside.

Physical handicap does not necessarily preclude internment. John Collins, of Abercorn Street, Belfast, has been interned, although he has a beart condition and only one eye. Collins believes that he was arrested because he was photographe attending an IRA funeral: a suggestion which is credible, because interrogations inside Crumlin seem to have heen baphazard enough to support the idea that the security forces' information is often distinctly hazy.

John McGuffin, a Belfast lecturer who was arrested and released, says that he was questioned about the operations of the Soviet KGB in Ulster, and also asked if be knew Jerry Rubin, the American Yippy leader. He also claims to have been given a long sermon on the evils of atheism.

It is also possible to gether information about internees from relatives, acquaintances and associates. Obviously again, there is a risk of bias: but in some cases, information from such sources does square with official estimates. Give the Irish dual nationality—Thorp

A BOLD new political imitative in Ireland was proposed yesterday by Mr Jeremy Thorpe, the Liberal leader, in his major in Ireland was proposed yester-day by Mr Jeremy Thorpe, the Liberal leader, in his major apeech at the close of the party's conference at Scarborough. He suggested that dual nationally between Britain and Eire should be offered to those who want it, thus enabling "men and women openly and bonourably to express their joint allegiance." He claimed that if "we genuinely want to transform the whole climate of Ireland and extend the hand of friendship rather than perpetuate the hullets of hatred and distrust, here at least is a new practical expres-sion of our goodwill, the result sion of our goodwill, the result of which would be a positive commitment to peace."

The Liberal leader claimed that the logic of introducing Proportional Representation for Stormont, which he expected the British Government to do, while denying it to Westminster, "must be that fair representation for minorities is only to be granted after they resort to violence. To bandicap the Liberals so unfairly accentuated the alienation from bandicap the Liberals so unfairly accentuated the alienation from the Parliamentary system which is the dangerous feature of modern politics."

As for the internal party crisis over relations with the new generation of Red Guards, Mr Thorpe bad a pat on the bead and a rap on the knuckles for the Young Liberals. He praised their Young Liberals. He praised their liberalism in action over the bomeless, the urban crisis and racialism in sport.

"I ask no greater test of Young Liberals but they should be young and should be liberals—and I repeat liberals," he said, to prolonged applause from the delegates. "But I ask them to which is a philosophy that is radical but tolerant, firm but bumane, aggressive but law-abiding."

He welcomed the proposal that every Young Liberal should initially be enrolled as a member of his constituency organisation, so that each was similarly in-volved in the realities of self-discipling discipline.

TODAY, almost miraculously, the democracles of western Europe live in peace. To this there is but one exception—Northern Ireland. There, added to the dangers of fighting across the border, lurks the greater and crueller risk of civil war, with all the agony and civilian bloodshed that this involves. Already, since October 1968 more than 100 men, women, and worst of all children, bave died through political violence. How much more appalling would have been the total were it not for the fact total were it not for the fact that this part of Britain is currently garrisoned by 12,000

Liberais should be clear on three basic principles. First that this country will not tolerate or submit to violence from any quarter, and I emphasise the word any. Second, that there must be ufter fairness between members of all communities. And third there can be no change in the border without the genuine con-sent of people living North and South. Let no one underestimate the

the extent to which any Ulster Tory Governments have dis-criminated against that minority over the past 50 years. Were it otherwise there would bave been no need for the Downing Street declaration of August Street declaration of Aligust 1969; no need for a package of reforms to be forced upon the Stormont Government which hitherto they bad bitterly opposed—and I might add—possibly no need for 12,000 troops trying to keep peace in one part of these isles.

[Mr Thorpe welcomed the tripartite talks between Mr Heath Mr Faulkner and Mr Lynch but mr Faulkner and Mr Lynch out pointed out that others opposed them.] Already two Unionist MPs have resigned because Mr Faulkner is actually to sit at a table with Mr Lynch. It is politically easier for Chancelior Brandt to talk to the East Germand then for a Stormack Prime. mans than for a Stormont Prime Minister to converse with Dublin. Then again we have internment. ner's allegation that every one prefer internment to the risk of the 219 detainees is involved

Lord Craigavon, that Stormont was to be run "as a Protestant Parliament for a Protestant people" was still the driving ambition of the majority of Ulster'a ruling Party.

In these circumstances, unless the political genius which this country has shown in so many parts of the world is to fall in Northern Ireland, new and dramatic initiatives are needed.

I have already said that the question of the border cannot be changed without genuine consent. As a Liberal who believes sent. As a Liberal who believes in the right of people to determine their own destiny, this cannot be repeated too often. But as Liberals what is our hope? what is our vision for the future? For me, it is to bind up the wounds of Ireland; to help Ireland to be reunited.

Already citizens of the Republic occupy a special and privi-leged position in this country. They enjoy a special status under the British Nationality Act of 1948; they are not subject to any of the regulations affecting aliens or Commonwealth citizens. . . .

In 1940 Sir Winston Churchill In 1940 Sir Winston Churchill offered joint citizenship to the people of France. Nibble the nuts and eave.

Most restaurant owners agree with us when we tell them about KlosterPrinz, that veritable Prince of Piesporters a deliciously crisp, slightly dry Moselle, the most handsome compliment that can be paid to good food.

But there are still a few who remain impervious to our coaxing. We've tried convincing them. We really have. Arguments, cajolery, persuasive blandishments. Well, the time for talking is over. Action is called for.

So this is where we need your help. We'd like you to seek out these stubborn establishments, demand to see the wine list before you even look at the menu, summon up your most clear, ringing tones and say "The justifiably renowned KlosterPrinz would seem to be conspicuous by its absence. Hmm". Then, while the wine waiter looks on in wild surmise, just nibble the nuts

Now this may not make you particularly popular. But when the restaurant in question gives up the unequal struggle and adds KlosterPrinz to its wine list, you may look back with satisfaction on a Job Well Done. And, like Thomas Osbert Mordaunt (1730-1809) once said: "One crowded hour of glorious life is worth an age without a name".

Simonpieri: tell-tale heart

THE FRENCH police, who arrested o Corsican named Ange Simonpieri in Ajaccio last week, Details of all these courses—the colleges, the type of course and so nn—are available from the 300-strong network of local advisory officers established throughout the country by the are claiming that they have at last captured one of the "hig wheels" of the heroin traffic.

Eighty per cent of the heroin to reach the United States comes from Turkey and passes through Murseilles for processing. The Americans have long accused the French of reluctonce to crack down on the Murseilles traffickers and hinted at protection in high places.

For four years Simonpiert has For jour years Simonpieri has certainly enjoyed o remarkable immunity from orrest. During that period he has cropped up in a variety of drugs cases involving o hunchback in the Florida Everglades, a patricidal heiress, an ex-banker trading in paella, and the case of the TWA tollets.

As a result both Swiss and As a result both Swiss and American police have long been "anxious to question" him, and for the past year one of Europe's leading criminal lawyers has been publicity denouncing Simonpieri Ind demanding his arrest. "Someone," Simonpieri muttered to a friend in Ajaccio's main street a fortnight ogo, "is out to shop me." This is the trail which finally led to his arrest.

WHEN THE cruise ahip Frederico C docked in the Miami Everglades from Nice on the morning of August 31, 1967, a US customs officer, John Wroth, found a disembarking passenger's hunchback unconvincing. He playfully patted Willie Lambert, a Swiss garage mechanic, on the hack and asked if it was giving him trouble, Lambert fled towards a waiting taxi in which there was another passenger from the Frederico C, a young woman wearling dark glasses.

Wroth, gave chase and subsequent investigation showed that Lamhert's "artificial protuberance" contained 25 pounds of heroin, about half the million pounds' worth he had hrought from Nice. The girl in the taxi was his mistress, Josette Bauer, who had escaped from a Swiss prises three years carlier where prison three years earlier where she was serving eight years for her part in the murder of her wealthy father. The pair was given a seven-year prison sen-tence by a Miami court. But Josette Bauer managed to escape

However, before her escape the lovers decided to talk. The drugs, they claimed, had been given to them by Ange Simon-pieri, a Corsican and former electoral agent of the Gaullist party who lived with a woman night cluh owner at Marsangy in the Yonne, 60 miles to the south-east of Paris.

The drugs were to be delivered to a Swiss named Robert Mori at the Hilton Hotel in Boston. Earlier that year Bauer had delivered another consignment to Mori in Boston. A warrant was not out for Mori's avertant was put out for Mori's arrest (he had judiciously fled to Switzerland) and he was finally arrested in Paris.

In January 1970 the Swiss authorities again asked Judge Roussel to examine Simonpieri who promptly took to his sick bed armed with electro-cardiograms and letters from prominent specialists saying excitement would be fatal. Again nothing bappened, and Simonpieri's cardiac crisis passed. that one of the staging posts between the processing plants in Marseilles and America was often Switzerland. The Swiss code of banking secrecy enabled large sums of money to change hands discreetly, and one of the unwritten laws of the Swiss customs service is that incoming toms service is that incoming travellers are rarely searched in case they bappen to be carrying large sums of money. Nicolet had decided to conduct large sums of money.

One of the simplest devices for getting the drugs from Europe to America involved the smuggler joining a TWA flight to, say. New York which afterwards became a domestic American flight on to, say, San Francisco. During the transatlantic leg he would secrete the drugs behind a panel in the toilet (TWA toilets were apparently best suited for this) and disembark at New York, passing through customs "clean." An accomplice would then join The trial was nearly at an end when, on April 29 of this year, Nicolet rose and told the Geneva court: "The European leader of the drug gang is a Frenchman. He lives in France. He is called Ange Simonpieri."

The powers of Mr Marcellin (the French Minister of the Interior), he jihed, did not extend as far as Marsellles; one did not arrest an electoral agent of the ruling party who for years bad been flooding the Western world with heroin. He then ohligingly stepped out of court and repeated the charge so that Simonpieri could feel free to sue him.

The French Press accordingly gave extensive coverage to Nicolet's accusations the follow-ing day, but again the only noticeable effect was a recurrence of Simponpleri's heart trouble, as a result of which he took up residence in the private Clinique Grandval in Ajaccio. Hirsch got the surprisingly light sentence of six and a half years.

gone to work for him during Hirsch's unfortunate absence. Before his arrest Mori had been inconsiderate enough to run up a number of debts and to mention Hirsch as a talented friend. In what better way could Hirsch solve his money prohlems and at the same time pay bis friends debts than by going into partnership with Swalle? Swalle indicated that his business was Both the Swiss and the French Press had gone further than Nicolet in suggesting that Simonpieri enjoyed the protection of a French "parallel service" nrganisation, specifically the Service d'Action Civique (SAC) whose function in the heyday of Gaullist rule was, at its simplest, to slience hecklers at Gaullist meetings and to disrupt opposition meetings. They were often armed, hore passes which rendered them immune to police intercated that his business was drugs and, Hirsch claims, that he would be unwise to refuse the Under Swalle's guidance Hirsch shipped 120 kilos of heroin to America in TWA toilets before ered them immune to police interference, and, on occasions, supplemented the "gorillas" who guarded de Gaulle and his ministers from the OAS. Most of them the Americans tumbled to the scheme. Undeterred, Hirsch formed the Panamanian Food and were recru paella in tins from Europe to America. He had added 67 kllos of heroin to the paella before element of the Corsican underworld.

The SAC were perhaps the least sinister manifestation of what became popularly known as the "harbouzes." With considerable justification the "harbouzes" were credited with complicity in all the more unsavoury episodes of Gaullist rule, such as the disappearance of Ben Barka and the kidnapping in Germany of the OAS chief, Colonel Antoine Argoud.

FINALLY, frustrated by the continued protection of Simonpleri, whatever its source, Nicolet manoeuwred Judge Roussel, a French Minister and some drug experts on to a Radio Luxembourg round-table discussion of the drug problem in France nn August 28.

Predictably, he repeated his accusations against Simonpleri request on to the police, hut no action was taken.

THE ARREST of Mori confirmed that one of the staging posts between the processing plants in Marseilles and America was code of banking secrecy enabled large sums of money to change out his photo from an assortment of 30 others.

In January 1970 the Swiss attack Roussel pleaded lamely that it was all sub judice. But by September 14 he had finally secret that it was all sub judice. But by September 14 he had finally secret that arrest. Despite the fact that grams and letters from prominent specialists saying excitement would be fatal. Again nothing out.

NICOLET, as it happens, has never really believed that Simon-pieri was much more than a transport manager of the heroin trade, and told us as much shortly after his courtroom outburst. His was partly a legal ploy, partly genuine indignation and a patriotic desire to clear the name of Switzerland, and partly a sincere hope that Simonpieri's arrest would lead a few steps closer to the brains"

Two American reports have this year given some clue to the possible identity of the "hrains" and the reason for the immunity and the reason for the immunity of the racketeers. One, a study of the world beroin problem, was published by the federal government printing office and suhmitted to Congress on May 27. It said that all the narcotics cases in Marseilles for the past 10 years had involved four Corsign families, which were Corsican families, which were named. But, the report said, that French police were hampered in getting proof by Swiss banking secrecy.

Only one family publicly denied the allegations, and soon after its bead gave The Sunday Times an exclusive Interview to explain how the misunderstand-ing had arisen. He then ex-plained his own thesis on the nature of the drug traffic.

This corresponded closely to the contents of a second Ameri-can report—a confidential one on the French drug situation submitted recently to President Nixon. It was in turn communicated to the French who admit that the report claims that a considerable number " of those engaged in the traffic are members of SAC.

"Is it surprising," the Corsican asks, "if, when you have a considerable number of questionable characters travelling around the country with 'laisser passers' to wave at the police, that some of them should have heroin rather than state papers in the boots of their car?" wants one. Unfortunately, this trend apparently could not be spotted early enough for it to be handled.

What it means now, say the spokesmen is that the British system will have to double in size in the next 10 years. So far the Post Office is keeping ahreast of its own overoil target for the decade—1.2 million new lines a year will he enough—hut is falling behind in what is wanted here and now. wanted here and now.

FROM the customer's point of view, the danger that the Post Office will make a huge increase in installation charges is very real. This step was under con-sideration until the Confedera-announced its period of voluntary restraint. It would not only choke back demand but also belp the Post Office out of a cash shortage which has already led to a cut-back in overtime and recruitment.

Furthermore, it has been a great deal easier for the Post Office to bump up charges since the Post Office Act of 1969 which turned the GPO into a supposedly commercial corporation. In the bad old days Parliament had to vet all price increases. Now all that is necessary is for the Post Office to consult POUNC, the Post Office Users' National Council, and then—one day before applying the new rates—to announce its intention in the official gazettes of Belfast, Edinburgh and London.

What this freedom in price-fixing can mean in practice has tragi-comedy of errors which ended earlier this year. In 1970, the Post Office increased telephone charges retrospectively, on many bills describing the extra money now due as "arrears."

Dozens of subscribers, enraged by what they considered a clear breach of commercial practice and spurred on by the independ-ent Telephone Users' Association. refused to pay up. To their astonishment, it was clearly demonstrated by legal advisers that, under the 1969 Act, the Post Office had power to do not only this but a good deal more.

Meanwhile, it has yet to dawn on the public that the Post Office is totally exempted from the main disciplines of normal commercial practice. Specifically, there is no contractual relationsblp between the Post Office and Its private users. This means that whatever the Post Office does (more or less), it cannot be sued.

For example, it could, with legal impunity, refuse to repay a disputed telephone account even if it bad been proved in the wrong. And a user cannot claim damages for any loss resulting from, say, a failure in Post Office equipment.

At a time when Parllament bas been at pains to outlaw the un-fair shedding of traders' liabi-lities, it is curious that the Post Office—a complete monopoly now being hailed as a commercial en-terprise and incidentally the big-gest business in the land—has it-self been permitted to shed all direct responsibility to Its users.

More cheerfully, we can report an improvement in the STD service. In its last published figures—for 1969/70—the Post Office admitted that 8.6 per cent of STD calls went wrong hecause of difficulties in the system. This figure is now running at about 7 per cent.

Scientists claim to have Dutch elm cure

The details of the treatment are not being released until it bas heen patented, when a report will be published. This will probably be within the next month or twn. But one of the scientists involved, Dr James Thomas, of the Canadian Forestry Service, was able to outline to me last week the principle on which the treat-

Trials started this summer, and scientists have been taking weekly samples from injected trees to see how effective the treatment has been. Dr Thomas said: "Things look very promis-

said: "Things look very promising."

So far the experiments have heen concerned mainly with preventing trees from becoming infected, but it looks as though the treatment may sometimes help to cure infected trees too, particularly if the infection can be diagnosed early.

The infective agent is a fungus, spread by beetles, which blocks the tree's sap channels so that the affected parts wither and die. According to provisional estimates by the Forestry Commission 5 per cent of Britain's 7 million hedgerow clms are already dead or dying, and another 5 per cent are infected. Most elms are found in the southern half of England.

The chemicals used in the Canadian treatment were developed in Toronto University's shade tree laboratory. The exact nature of the chemicals is still secret, but it is pretty certain that they

The provisional estimate of costs presented by Buffalo on Friday shows total receipts of £18,750 based on the sale of 15,000 seats, the legal capacity and total expenditure of £16,359—leaving a net profit of £2,391. Unfortunately, no one had remembered insurance. Surrey's rental included insurance for the grounds, but not for the occupants. An insurance deal was fixed yesterday morning: it was fixed yesterday morning: it cost £2,000.

Actual profits of the concert will not be known until next month and will be hased on additional tickets sold at the ground yesterday and fees from on-site concessions. Certainly they are uolikely to reach the dizzy heights of £60,000 announced by Buffalo as the amount they hoped would go to Bangla Desh.

The English have been doing it all wrong for years.

It's no wonder the English have a reputation for being cold in bed. It's the bedclothes they use. They're so restricting, they're more of a hindrance than a help. But that's no excuse any more. Because under a Slumberdown continental quilt you can be as free as you like. With a Slumberdown there are no more heavy blankets to weigh you down. No more fighting the bedclothes trying to relax. Instead, there's all the soft, seductive warmth of natural down and feather snuggling you gently to sleep. And in the morning there's another dream to wake up to - no more tiresome bedmaking. All you do is puff up the pillow.

smooth out the bottom sheet and swish up the Slumberdown. And that's it. All over in 18 seconds. Try one at bedtime. It will do

FOR the past week Dimitri Volokhov, one of Russia's top atom spies and nicknamed "France's Nunn May" after the British spy Nunn May" after the British spy of the 1950s, has been occupying a closely-guarded cell in the Sante Prison, Paris. And what is particularly galling to the KGB, the Russian secret police, on the eve of Mr Brezhnev's visit to France, is that Volokhov, 39-year-old French physicist, who French officials say hetrayed most of France's nuclear secrets to the Russians, need never have been caught but for the clumsiness of caught but for the clumsiness of Soviet military attaché.

Volokhov has been charged with espionage activity over 11 years. Africans-Makonnen of Ethiopia and Djermakoye of Niger—but the Africans do not easily unite behind a single candidate.

The South Americans have united behind the Peruvian ambassador to the UN, Javier Perez de Cuellar. They think it is their turn to provide the Secretary General and, if Cueller will not do, they may offer a Chilean exforeign minister, Gabriel Valdez.

But the "Buggins' turn" principle, which applies to many UN appointments, does not stretch as far as the top job. It is unlikely that a European would be acceptable to enough factions although two are menwould be acceptable to enough factions, although two are mentioned besides the unfortunate Jakobson—Kurt Valdheim of Austria and the Italian Foreign Minister, Addo Moro. One name mentioned wistfully by English-speaking UN members is Lee Kuan Yew of Singapore; but they all add that the odds seem heavily against him.

Russia and America, anticipating the inevitable upsets with the advent of China, will try to have a new Secretary-General who causes them as little trouble as possible, so few people expect the successor to U Thant to be a self-willed figure in the tradition of Dag Hammarskjold.

The British have a preference for a good administrator, which U Thant is not. The administrative qualities of most of the 10 potential candidates cited are difficult to judge; what is certain is that there is not a Hammarsk-judg among them

Complicating all this is that the new man will have to be acceptable to Communist China, which will become a member of the UN and its key body, the Security Council, either this year

The manneuvring over Peking's The manneuvring over Peking's entry is now becoming complex and America may be in for a setback. Last year, the UN passed a motion to admit China by twn votes; but the US, then bostile, insisted that China's admission was "an impurtant question"—and such issues have to be approved by a two-thirds majority of the General Assembly.

Then came the dramas of mldsummer 1971, with Nixon's emissary, Henry Nissinger, in Peking and a new policy enunciated by the Secretary of State, William Rogers: Peking should be allowed in but Chiang Kai-shek's Taiwan should not he thrown out. This the "two-China" policy, was rejected in August by the Chinese Prime Minister, Chou Chinese Prime Minister, Chou Enlal, but America still bupes to keep Taiwan in by using the same procedural device toat she used to keep China out—by demanding that Taiwan's expulsion be classed as an important question, thus requiring a two-thirds majority.

The new American ambassador to the UN, an ambitious Repubto the UN, an amoltious Republican politician named George and the State Department has instructed American ambassadors throughout the world to back him up. But it is now heginning to look as though the Americans will not get the necessary majority of votes to have the Taiwan issue declared an important question.

Already America has suffered Already America has suffered one diplomatic defeat. Originally, she tried to keep China off the Security Council, hut America's closest allies in South-East Asia—Japan, Austratia, and New Zealand—curtly informed Busb they would not co-sponsor such a resolution, and without their aid it would not pass. Consequently, on Thursday, President Nixon personally conceded defeat and agreed that Peking sbould have agreed that Peking should have Taiwan's seat on the Security Council.

Then the Japanese asked for even more time to consider whether to back America's "two China" policy. If Japan decides against, a decisive handful of small nations may follow suit and wreck Washington's plans, Japan's decision will be influenced by the unfortunate co-inci-dence of the retirement in six months of its Prime Minister, Eisaku Sato. Most potential suc-cessors do not wish to alienate Peking unnecessarily hy lobbying for Taiwan at the UN. They are trying to drag Japan on to the fence, and the State Department has a sinking feeling that they may succeed.

Britain, incidentally, reached its decision last January when Sir Alec Douglas-Home said: "There is only one seat for one country in the UN." The Americans have not even tried to change his

We recall other examples of odd driving. Dr Mackay tells of odd driving. Dr Mackay tells of a motorcyclist who did a U-turn In the middle of a motorway. And then there was the motorist who stopped to change a wheel in the fast lane of the M4. At 5.58 on Thursday evening, two articulated lorries, one close hehind the other in heavy traffic, are heading up the slope which

When we go out again next morning mist does sweep across the motorways, especially where they run through valleys or cuttings. But it makes little difference to the driving. Some hig lorries drive through the mist without any lights on. And the hunching continues.

A small meat lorry, THR 100J, is also in a hurry through the mist. He drives at 60 mph, literally five feet from the bumper of a Vauxhall Viva, which is waiting for another lorry to move out of the overtaking lane.

Farther on, down the M5, a lorry moves into the centre lane ahead of THR 1001. He pulls ancad of THE 1003. Kelvin Brodie, the photographer, leans back to take a picture through the rear window. The lorry driver sees bim, laughs and closes the gap from five to two feet. We are travelling at 60 mph.

INCIDENTS like this, and the fact that lorries played a large part in Monday's crashes, lead to demands that lorries should be restricted to the inside lane on motorways. The argument is that one slow lorry overtaking another slow lorry is generally the cause of traffic hunching up.

But the idea seems impractical. A hetter answer is to improve the performance of lorries. Britain is about to introduce power - to - weight regulations, which specify how powerful each Mercedes-Benz 220 2.2 litre, 4 cylinder, 116 bhp. Top speed over 100 mph.

The more you admire two-litre cars the more you'll appreciate the Mercedes-Benz 220

There are some very good two-litre cars on the road. More Comfort In this highly competitive sector of the car market, they have to be good.

Mercedes-Benz invite you to judge the 220 against that good standard and find that you really do get more. More endurance, for example. More ability to retain first-class condition so that your Initial investment is protected by low depreciation. More in every aspect of total car design...

More Performance

By performance Mercedes-Benz don't just mean 100 mph-plus top speed. They mean performance you can use. What Mercedes emphasise is the supremely relaxed above-average cruising speeds, whatever the condition of the road surface, and the important extra margin of acceleration, if required, at medium overtaking speeds. The Mercedes-Benz 220 4 cylinder 2.2 litre engine develops 116 bhp SAE with a top speed of 104 mph.

If you want more edge to that performance, take a look at the Mercedes-Benz 250 with a 6 cylinder 2.5 litre engine that develops 146 bhp and a top speed of 112 mph.

The designers of the 220 and 250 have achieved the spaciousness of larger Mercedes saloons within a more compact body. Seating is orthopaedically shaped to reduce fatigue. Comfort to Mercedes Benz is never a matter of ornate trappings but of finely calculated lay-out. You have precise finger-tip control over a machine that responds effortlessly. The car does the work. Not you.

More Reliability

"At 25,000 miles the car is still rattle-free the engine and transmission are better than new" said one Merced es owner. Such reactions are typical of men who choose a car that has set engineering standards that others simply cannot afford to follow.

More Personal Safety

As always, the cost of safety has not daunted Mercedes engineers. No other manufacturer devotes so high a proportion of his turnover to the pursuit of safety. The 220 and 250 combine both passive and active safety features. Things like individual wheel suspension with anti-dive control, anatomically correct driving position and all-round dual circuit disc-brakes. However, should a collision be unavoidable, the Mercedes-Benz "safety cell" (a rigid passenger compartment with impact absorbing zones front and rear), anti-burst door locks and impact absorbing steering column all help to reduce the possibility of serious injury.

The 220 and 250 are cars that deserve to be tested and talked over with the experts like any other important investment. Your nearest Mercedes-Benz dealer will be ready to do so. Alternatively, write to the address below for a brochure on the 220 or 250 and other cars in the range.

Inquiry into selection of Labour candidate

LABOUR PARTY officials will this week try to unravel the tangle which has developed over the choice of a candidate for a re-shaped Northern constituency. Two Labour MPSs were flighting for the nomination and now the loser is claiming that there were irregularities at the selection David Reed, MP for Sedge-field and at 26 the second youngest in the House, beat Mark Hughes, MP for Durbam, by two votes. Both men were elected for the first time at last year's general election, but the Sedge-field constituency [Lab. majority 12.831) disappears under the redistribution boundaries.

Durham has always been an attractive home for a Labour man (1970 majority 16,599) and now, of course, it promised to become even cosier.

The voting, certainly, was close. There were 77 votes for Mr Reed, a youthful former public relations officer for the North-East Deve-lopment Council, and 75 for his rival, the less flamboyant Mr Hughes, a former history lecturer at Durham University.

The result was on the face of it something of a surprise. Mr Hugbes had been regarded locally as the favourite. Explanations become hard to come by, however, when Mr Hughes com-plained to Transport House, Labour's national headquarters, that "there may have been one or more delegates who were not eligible to vote."

Mr Reg Underhill, Labour's assistant national agent, and Mr Ron Evers, its regional organiser, now plan to examine all the voting papers and the credentials of every delegate who attended the conference. Until the inquiry has been completed, Mr Reed's has been completed, but name will not go forward to the party's national executive for party's national executive for ercise for the Liberals. The

And last week they key figures in the affair were staying quiet. Mr Reed says: "Given that a complaint has been made, I welcome an inquiry just from the simple point of view that the air needs cleaning.'

Are Peter Hain's young men making Liberal a dirty word?

SCARBOROUGH has given the Liberals their most disastrous and depressing week for 20 years and, unless the Old Guard can succeed in coming to terms with the astonishing assortment of Young Liberals—who self-con-fessedly cover the whole political spectrum from libertarian socialist to Trotskyites, Maoists and anarchists as well as starry-eyed young idealists in the best Liberal tradition—the party is heading for the final break-up and permanent extinction.

Liberals, after all, are the best exponents of splitting, re-splitting and sub-splitting, so yet another upheaval in the long history of disruption which has destroyed the party for most of this century would be in the classic tradition. But this time it would be finality, with nothing left on one side hut a rump and on the other a motley crew of rebels and professional protesters.

This is why I believe that, despite the angry demands for confrontation and showdown, expulsion and pillory, both the traditionalists and the young hell-raisers will learn to live with each other; for without the dynamic vigour and political passion of the Young Liherals the party would be in danger of collapse with hardening arteries, and without the respectable um-hrella of the party the New Era Liberals would soon be reduced to a ragbag of way-out, drop-out pressure groupings without a central national mission and theme.

servative predecessors, and a conservative-minded Labour Party retaining only faint traces of radicalism, the Liheral Party should be taking off once again in yet another round of buoyant revivalism. But instead of a rebirth, we were sitting in on a wake.

The week's debates on the big issues were solemn and drab, with no bite or joy, largely be-cause people's minds were gripped by the fear of impending civil war which would overwhelm and destroy the party to an ex-tent to which the Bevanite crises never destroyed Lahour. It was a narrow escape.

Peter Hazelhurst reports the Bengal nightmare

PLAGUED by perennial floods, an unprecedented population explosion, a rapidly deteriorating economy and devastated by two of the greatest natural and manmade disasters in recent history, the two provinces of East and West Bengal have been reduced today to a nightware of terror.

Hoechst research beats the weather

Outdoor events are very much affected by the caprices of the weather. Rainsodden sites, with the bedraggled participants about as enthusiastic as fifth formers during a history lesson, have hardly ever given rise to memorable occasions. Not infrequently, the event has had to be cancelled altogether, hardly to the delight of the organisers.

In collaboration with famous architects, Hoechst research has now developed a temporary cover that renders outdoor activities independent of the weather. Sports arenas, for example, holding up to 100,000 spectators, or swimming pools, can be protected in this way. The flexible cover is a coated fabric in Trevira high tenacity, a material of extreme strength. Rot-proof and tear-resistant and yet light-permeable and so flexible that it can be erected quickly in bad weather. A new form of architecture has arrived. Trevira high tenacity takes sports arenas under its wings in all weathers to the benefit of all sports lovers.

Ahead through systems thinking

Trevira high tenacity for large scale covers - the result of Hoechst knowledge and experience in many fields: man-made fibres where Hoechst has an immense amount of know-how in production and processing; plastics where Hoechst is equally expert in manufacturing and laminating techniques. Thus, Hoechst is the forward-looking partner of architects and the building industry.

Systems thinking is the Hoechst strategy. Research, development and product experience in many areas are concentrated on the solution of specific problems. Interdisciplinary thinking, systems analysis and systems technique to bring success.

To keep thinking ahead - to solve the problems of today and tomorrow - Hoechst employs more than 10,300 people in research and development with a research investment this year of more than £60 million.

Hoechst in Britain

Hoechst UK Ltd is an independent company within the international Hoechst group. Its British staff know their country, its problems, its people; and they realise where Hoechst knowhow can inject into Britain's economy the experience gained by the parent company during more than a century in chemistry. In pharmaceuticals, for example, where Lasix-the modern diuretic - has revolutionised therapy. In the textile industry, where Trevira polyester fibre has brought an entirely new concept to fashion. And where membrane structures from Trevira high tenacity fabric have at long last rendered outdoor events independent of the weather. Or in dyestuffs where experiments are proceeding to make the grass look greener in football stadiums and other sports arenas. Whether your problems are in plastics or paint raw materials. in dyestuffs or pigments, in fibres or pharmaceuticals, in agro-chemicals or films, Hoechst UK can help you promptly and efficiently.

wife's shoulders, and considers this to he grossly unfair: he has to work himself every day and do it by himself. Why should his wife not do her sbare?

"The result often is that the hushand turns out the girl in order to create more work for the wife," says Dr Sachs. "This of course leads to a further deterioration of the situation."

In both cases the ou-pair girl

The impact au pair girl THE ARRIVAL of the au-pair grid traditionally an ice-cool Scandinavian, but more probably a sensible girl from Liege or Baden-Wurttemberg—can he a major trauma for the family involved. In fact the parents are probably more cervous about her impact and about how she will fit in than about anything since the hirth of about anything since the hirth of their last child. There are at the moment about 20,000 en-pair girls or maids helping out in British households, but so far nohody has carried out a survey into their effect on middle-class mores. In America, however, Dr Lisbeth Sachs, a Brooklyn psychoanalyst has made a study of the profound influence their arrival may have, particu-larly on children and their rela-tionship with their parents. Fer tionship with their pareots. Her cooclusions are published in the letest issue of The Psychoanalytic Quarterly. She believes that on the whole the introduction of an outsider has a healthy, even therapeutic effect on family life. But she has observed all too often the way in which an ac-pair girl vokes a new awareness between members of the family. She may between husband and wife.

"When there is a bad relationship between them, the wife, who has decided she needs a maid, may deliberately choose an old, even bad-tempered woman, or a very plain girl," she said. "This is not so much because she is frightened of her hushand having an affair with the girl, as because she wants to tell him deliberately that she does not trust him. And of course he sees this choice as a calculated insult."

Dr Sachs has often observed the reverse situation when a even smooth over the odd disagreement.

"After all, a husband and wife can't really have e blinding row in front of ber," says Dr Sachs. "So instead they contain their anger and talk in normal tones. That can only he to the good: it's the difference hetween civilised behaviour and barbarity."
The effect on children, however, is less ohvious but almost certainly further-reaching. It is here that Dr Sachs has done her most intensive work, and she cites several key cases where the arrival of a maid or an au-pair has significantly changed the outlook and personality of a child. One ten-year-old boy who had always heen quiet, at times a hit stubborn and moody but, in his parent's view, was generally well-hebaved, changed dramatically on the arrival of a new maid. He began complaining about his mother's cooking, comparing it unfavourably to the new girl's. He grew extremely chummy with her, exchanging confidences he seldom imparted to his family. In general his behaviour became namediatable and her was hard to predictable and he was hard to dismiss the maid, hlaming her for the child's" problems." But they were persuaded to keep her and as time weot on the boy grew away from her and back to the mother: he even went through a stage when he refused to eat dinners cooked by the maid and would only touch food prepared by his mother. Finally, however, he seemed to reach a more balanced state. He confided that he preferred talking to his parents, hut "I still talk to her (the maid) and kid around with ber because she oursed me when I was sick." It emerged that he was referring to the time when his relatiooship with his parents therapeutic role she had played Another boy of eight years had been hrought up almost from birth by a series of French maids —his mother took little interest in him. He found communication with the girls very difficult since mostly they had only just arrived in the country and their English was poor. The combination of a lack of understanding from both the mother and the major had the mother and the maids had very serious results.

Nevertheless Dr Sachs considers that if the maids had oot been there the hreak with his parents would have heen far more serious and damaging. The boy, the saws was able to direct his sbe says, was able to direct his hostility oo to them instead of venting his anger on his mother and in this way the relationship, though frail, was preserved.

Sometimes an au-pair girl can almost fill the role of a psychia-trist herself. Dr Sachs cites the case of a little girl who found it difficult to eat well for complex psychological reasons. The arrival of an outside girl however prompted a change of attitude. It allowed the child to eat reasonahly well in ber presence and in talking to her she was ahle to rid herself of many of her fantasies. Significantly the little girl coo-fided to Dr Sachs: "With you it's easy to eat, just like with my maid."

Dr Sachs concludes that the maid or au-pair plays an important part io a child's matur-lng and can ofteo help him io his relationship with his pareots. Of course the impact on the girls themselves is rather a different story. If Birgit, or Looise or Manuela thought they were going to be used as key elements in a psychological battlefield, they might not be quite so keen to

Why 350 a day get these pains

Yet now it is the commocest surgical emergency there is. Some 350 patients are admitted every day with the familiar symptoms: in the middle of the night they were woken by severe pain just around the navel. The pain they moved to the right groin and they were sick several times.

Usually the surgeon will find that little is apparently abnormal, except that the groin area is tender. However, an operation reveals a tense, swollen appendix, which, with luck, has not yet

Fortunately, almost all of these patients will recover, and will be nooe the worse for the removal of a useless piece of their intestine. But why ahould this particular disease, put on the surgical map in 1902 when an appendix operation forced King Edward VII to postpone his coronation, have had such a meteoric rise? had such a meteoric rise?

Until this week there has been no satisfactory answer. But now no saustactory answer. But how a distinguished surgeon has produced a convincing solution. Appendicitis, he suggests, is yet another pecalty we pay for civilisation. Not hecause of its stresses, hot hecause modern western diet lacks the essential elements which encourage the elements which encourage the intestine to work properly.

The eppendix is a small worm shaped tube, about four inches long, which is attached to the first part of the large intestine, called the caecum. Nobody knows what its joh is, and most experts have assumed that it is a hang-over from far distant ancestors.

This debate about evolutionary niceties would have been merely academic if it was oot for the frequency with which the appeodix hecomes inflamed. Even meticulous examination of specimens removed by operation has given little clue es to the cause of the inflammation.

Mr Denis Burkitt, e surgeon oow working for the Medical Research Council, adopted a new epproach based on epidemiology in other words, studying the geographical distribution of the disease. The results of this survey, puhlisbed in the September issue of the British Journal of Surgery, are striking. In really primitive communities appendicitis is atill a rarity. Four senior doctors working in East Africa had seen no case of appendicitis for he-tweeo 17 and 30 years. Another practising in the Congo had seen one case in 28 years, while yet another surgeoo working in Northern Nigeria had seen only three cases during a nine year period among a total of 30,000 hospital admissions.

Yet Europeans living in these arts seemed to develop appendicitis with much the same frequency as they did at home. The next result of the survey is the finding that the more

Top of the reading pops

TELEVISION has had remarkably little effect on the standard of books which today's children read. Far from beiog adversely conditioned by a steady diet of Dr Who or American TV cartoons, they appear to stick to the kind of literature which would bave heeo required reading 25 years ago.

Current research into the reading habits of childreo from 10-14, reveals that a majority tackles at least one book a mooth. And it is the traditional classics—Black Beauty, Little Women and Treasure Island—which head the list. Oliver Twist, Jane Eyre and Tom Sawyer are also well placed in the Top Ten.

Nine thousand children aged

Nine thousand children aged 10, 12 and 14 from schools throughout England and Wales are providing the answers. These are now being coded for detailed analysis by a Chilton Atlas computer.

The four-year project is conducted at the University of Sheffield Institute of Education with a £21,000 grant from the Schools' Council. It is the first exteosive study of children's reading habits for more than 30 years.

reading habits for more than 30 years.

New authors of children's books, such as Alan Garner and Rosemary Sutcliffe, have not figured prominently. But the overall winner of the poll for favourite writer goes to Enid Blyton, with runners-up Charles Dickens, Agatha Christie and Rohert Louis Stevenson a loog way behiod. Because of her prolific output, only one Blyton adventure, The Secret Seven, features in the list of most frequently mentioned hooks.

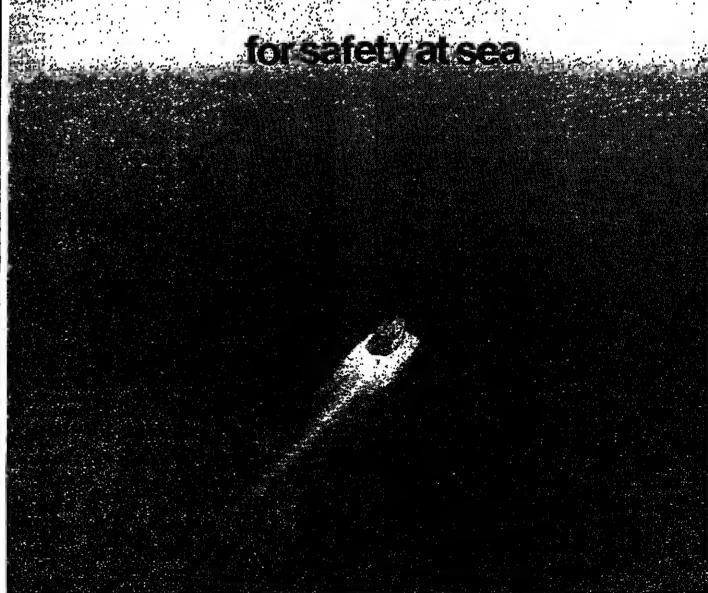

The questionoaire was circulated in March tlus year to a stratified national sample of 197 primary schools, with a 99% return. Last year a pilot survey of 450 children had helped to mould the structure of the questionoaire itself. But some children still ran out of space on the questionnaire claiming to have read twelve or more books in the previous four weeks.

Ooe of the points to he evaluated is the suggestion that children may have been led into traditional replies because they were completing the questionnaires in a school environment.

The research team's higgest problem to date has heen tracking down some of the more esoteric titles listed by children. "Ahoot 15 children put down The Sex and Savagery of Hells Angels," said a researcher. "We finally found an unsold copy in a Boots in Chesterfield. It's a rather lurid paperhack ebout the sex lurid paperhack ebout the sex life of gangs in America—not the best of reading."

IF you walk intu a travel agency tomorrow morning and ask the price of an air ticket to New York, you will have to forgive the man behind the counter if his face grows contorted and he clutches at his collar before giving you one of about 15 answers. The announcement by Lufthansa, the German airline, that it intends to break the international rules and offer its own law fares has created unprecedented confusion in the travel business. BRIAN MOYNAHAN explains why only one person stands to gain from the chaos-you, the passenger.

But its reverberations last week produced, inevitably, yet further confusion. BOAC announced that it would continue to advocate the fare atructure It has been pressing for all along through the International Air Transport Association—"lower fares that we had expected to achieve by the calm processes of international agreement." Pan American expressed its regrets at Lufthansa's presumption but said that it was "determined to remain in competition." And Air Canada, among others said that it was going to take advantage of the new sitution to introduce its own cheap fares.

Meanwhile Mr Knut Hammers-kjöld, Director-General of IATA was speaking with forked tongue in Geneva by admitting that if the Germans could not be brought to beel there would be outright competition on the North Atlantic route from February 1, but add-the public at its own rates. It is the massive boom in charter flights that has led to the current infighting amongst the scheduled airlines. Charter grew as a poor relation on the North Atlantic routes, then diversified into package tours in Europe. Little attention was paid to it whilst it created its own low cost market, but it can no longer be ignored. Its growth longer be ignored. Its growth rate is outstripping scheduled flights by up to 15 times on some routes, and, faced by overcapacity on some of their planes.

crude "bottoms on seats" terms. The morass of IATA regulations has been playing into the hands of the charter operators who of course cut straight through them. The diagram shows how many different fares can be in force on the same route, all cunfusing and all well above the charter rates. This has caused a snowballing of "seat brokers" offering irregular but cheap tickets to people who do not know what they should be paying, but do know that there are plenty of discounts around-even if the seat broker is bend-

But of course Mr Hammersköld's membera did not agree al their last fares conference in Montreal. They are meeting again in Miami. Legitimate charters—those involving cheaper travel for bona fide groups—will still be a worthwhile proposition for the public. Luftbansa director Frank Beckmann agreed last week that "we cannot go down to the level of the charter price."

That price from London to New York or Eastern Canada is likely to be £70. The IATA equi-valent will still work out at over £30 more, but without the onus of fixed departure and return dates, and travelling with a group. Just how much more depends largely on whether BOAC's Earlybird concept beats the Lufthansa no strings proposal.

Earlybird would be a cheaper

The advantages to the airline are clear enough: besides earning interest on early payment, flights can be easily adjusted to meet known demand. The passenger not only has to part with his cash an an early with his cash an an early stage in the proceedings, but also has the charter-type restriction of having to stick to a fixed de-parture date.

You don't look like your parents, so why have cheques that look like theirs?

National Westminster have produced a series of cheques specially for students. All you have to do to get them is open an account with Nat West. We've got more branches than any other bank, so if there isn't one actually in your university or college, there's always one nearby. And if you open an account with us now, we'll transfer it to the nearest branch when you go up.

Provided you're a full-time student, and you keep in credit, we won't charge you for looking after your account.

There's no charge for the specially designed cheques, either. Each student cheque book contains several original designs in different colours. They don't look a bit like your Dad's.

But they're perfectly acceptable to everyone.

THE IRISH AGONY is moving towards resolution. Whether the resolution is in blood or reasoned argument depends to a great extent on two gatherings in the next eight days. Tomorrow week the heads of the three Governments in the British Isles meet at Chequers. It is a last chance for a negotiated peace. Before their meeting, the special session at Westminster on Wednesday and Thursday could greatly strengthen Mr Heath in pursuing with his fellow Prime Ministers the clear and imaginative line vital to a settlement.

British parliamentarians anxious to pull British troops clear of this ancient morass will first need to ask how the Heath Government stumbled so deep into it. Last week's signing of intern-ment orders on no fewer than 219 IRA suspects gave the clue. Partly out of sloth, partly out of barrenness of ideas, partly out of a care that nothing should make waves for the Market hoat, the Government's prime concern has heen to keep the Stormont system in being at almost any cost; and that has meant agreeing to virtually anything the Northern Ireland Premier of the moment might ask as the means to keeping his followers' hands from his

The cost has been paid; and it has mounted steadily. It is counted not just in the deaths of twenty-three British soldiers but in rising despair among more than half a million members of the Northern minority. Until lately—until last week, even—it could still be decently argued that the cost was hearable. Not now. No nation was hearable. Not now. No nation an make systematic, large-scale use of mprisonment without trial and expect s moral health to survive unimpaired. is sad, but it must he said: Mr Maudig never more clearly showed his al failure to measure up to his Irish ponsibilities than when he allowed Faulkner to confirm the internment chose 219 men.

The worst flow from the fact the Britisb Government is acting as the tool of a disment is acting as the tool of a discredited Stormont administration. That list of men in prison is not Mr Maudling's list. It is not, in its entirety, the Army's list. It is a list authenticated by Mr Faulkner with the Orange lodges at his hack. The very least that Mr Maudling should have insisted on was that the judge to check it should be drawn from England. A Northern Ireland tribunal, whatever the calibre of the individual men, is not acceptable to the Catholic minority and ought not to he acceptable to the British Government. It is on the say-so of Mr Faulkner that the United Kingdom now joins the proud company of now joins the proud company of Greece, Portugal and South Africa as a country where a man against whom no charge will stick may still have his spirit broken by heing held in prison without prospect of release.

Faulkner's Danegeld

The internment order is not the last demand note which will be presented to the British Government. Mr Faulkner is already losing ground again in the esteem of the hard men of the Linionist Parky, when who may demand never win. Unless a halt is called, Mr Faulkner will be back for more Danegeld; and if not he, then an accelerating line of his successors, each one with his fitness for office more directly proportionate to his negligible freedom of action. The next demand will he for the re-forming of that shahby Protestant-supremacist militia, the B men: the one after that will be for the eviction, by British soldiers, of without altering one thing in particular: tenants who withhold their rent as part the Border. The attempt to shore up Stormont must be ahandoned. The existing system will not work decently, and no amount of tinkering will make it. Proportional representation? Supernumary institutions to give Catholics certain powers in certain areas? Sticking-plaster on a hurst hoiler. After internment, the minority will never again give its consent to heing governed by the majority; and it is too large to he governed without. The present Northern Ireland state has no future. When you go skiing with Halcyon, you'll find we never do things by halves.
Firstly, instead of chartering planes, we buy them.

Which means we can fly you out privately instead of bundling you off on a strange airline. And you get there in the comfort of a Court Line Aviation BAC Super 1-11 jet instead of taking pot luck.

Then when you get to your resort—St. Moritz, St. Anton, Val d'Isere or whatever, you'll never be thrown into a vast package-deal hotel. Simply because we don't deal in them. If you're fairly outgoing, you'll probably like our chalet parties. But if you're all for a quiet life, or you've got a few children you'd like to get off your hands, one of our small hotels might be more what you're looking for. Or you could rent a chalet privately.

Then there's the food and wine. No plastic tourist-type menus and a glass of vin ordinaire where we go. You get nothing less than Cordon Bleu cooking and as much wine as you can drink.

And even when you come to make out the cheque for the holiday, you'll notice a difference between the Halcyon bill and most others. Without making any promises, it could be as much as £30 less. Which is a small price to pay for a holiday with a private plane.

> In fact once you've taken your skis off at La Plagne, you need not venture out of doors again for anything until the following morning. The only thing is you have the distinct impression living in an airport, in which a very large number of passengers, dressed in snappy apresski outfits, spend hours wandering up and down, searching hopelessly for a non-existent departure gate. As a ski resort, La Plagne has everything to offer, except, for me, the most important thing

IT'S FUNNY the things that stick in one's mind. I always remember an episode in a TV spy scries in which two agents kept a sinister rendezvous in the gardens of the Schönbrunn Palace. The scene must have heen sbut in the winler; the view from the palace up to the Glariette, that folie de grandeur that sits high on the hill like the Gates of Heaven, was sbrouded

I've been haunted ever since by the magnificent, menacing atmosphere uf that garden. It's how I'd imagined the whole of Vienna to be—a mixture of vast, is chandeliered ballrooms, glittering what they claim to offer their with Hapsburg guests as they float customers here. Well, I wouldn't by to the strains of The Blue know about that, but certainly it Danube, and Orson Welles lurk-Danuhe, and Orson Welles lurking in a doorway; wine, song and gemütlichkeit in a frontier city start, the curiously shaped beyond which lie the mysteries wooden buildings have been lald of Rumania, Bulgaria and the beyond which lie the mysteries when you come down to it, which we did a few moments later, they are only woods. However, so determined was I tn maintain the fletion I had created about the city that I found myself overlooking the drab outskirts, the grey Danube, the Kärntnerstrasse milling with tourists, the ubiquitous roadworks (they're pulting in an underground, and not a moment too soon either), and the fact that among the fat, white Viennese ladles tucking into their cream cakes and coffee in Demel's there

THE TROUBLE with going hy car anywhere in Tunisia is that there are so many distractions to delay you. Our destination last March was the island of Djerba, but our route lcd us into the first of the great southern oases, the Oasis of Chenini at Gabes. So taken were we with the delicious shade and coolness, the birdsong and peach blossom, the clear water flowing between dense colonnades of date palms, that we stayed far too long.

To make up lost time we decided to take the ferry to Djerha instead of going the long way round and driving over the old Roman causeway. When we reached the coast it was dark and a cold wind was slopping waves against the jetty.

The ferry turned out to be a fishing boat which could take just two cars at a time, halanced on planks laid amidships with the bonnet overbanging on one side, of a beating in the past 50 years (thanks to our bombers, the Opera House bad lo be completely reconstructed); from a mighty empire of 50 millions stretching right across Hungary, Czechoslovakia and Northern Italy, Austria bas suddenly heen reduced to an insignificant neutral State of seven millions. But the one thing they can still boast about is their glorious past and, for a visitor with a little imagination and a feeling for history. Vienna is a perfect place for a long winter weekend. But do, I beg you, avoid the guided bus lours. One I was on managed to get round the Schönbrunn in 52 minutes flat, without spikes.

Afterwards the only thing that stuck in my mind was a riveting piece of information about the old stove beating system that "the smoke goes out the back-side and up on the roof." At the speed we went round I'm not surprised.

The next day I returned alone by tram to discover that the gar-dena are every bit as extraordinary as they'd appeared in that TV programme—tourists and all. I was especially keen on the very pretty little 18tb century 200, and the view from the top of the personal favourites

Other include two exhibitions—the Klimt in the Upper Belvedere and the sensational graphics in the Albertina; Fisher von Erlach's amazing Nationalamazing bibliothek; the perfect Roman-esque Abbey at Heiligenkreuz; the fonny little Clock Museum; two churches—the Baroque Karl-skirche and the Maria am Gestade the only bent church I know; the Kursalon, where every afternoon you can sit and listen to Strauss to your heart's content; and finally Grinsing, where I suppose you ought to go and drink wine in one of the beurigen. Perbaps the oddest thing about Vienna is that despita this enormous dependence splendid past, few of the buildings are more than a bundred or so years old. What with old Franz Joseph knocking down the city ramparts (and a large number of the old bouses) in the 1860s to make way for the Ringstrasse, and then two wars, little remains of old Vienna. Except, that is, the virtually unloughed First District behind the Stephansdom where, in the narrow streets among the original baroque town mansions, you get a pretty good idea of what Vienna must once bave been like.

As far as all that Harry Lime stuff is concerned, I never did locate the sewers; and the only people who lurk in dark doorways these days are the tarts.

How to get there: BEA and AUA (Austrian Airlines) operate daily return flights London to Vienna. Tourist excursion return fare: 556.65. Lunn-Poly do a four-day Friday to Monday package to Vienna from 525 including bed and breakfost and alghtseeing.

Only four rocks, one wedged under each wheel, separated us from pos-sible watery entombment, and in this fashion, hy moonlight, we crossed the shallow two-mile strait to Djerha. Djerha is a real desert island, a flat, sandy slice of the Sahara, sprinkled with 600,000 shockheaded palm trees and cast adrift on the Mediterranean. It also bas acres of figs and immemorial olives, hiblical wells, camels, sponge fishermen, 280 mosques, a village of 250 potters, and a sleepy town called Houmt Souk, with blinding white houses, cool a village here, and there are some splendidly comfortable hotels, including the Meninx and the glamorous Ulysse Palace. Like all modern Tunisian heach hotels they draw their inspiration from the traditional huilding styles of North Africa, Domes, walled courtyards, pillars, alcoves, arched doorways and vaulted rooms-all painted white.

The hotels are palatial, lowprofiled (the law says they must be no higher than the palm trees) and aurrounded by luxuriant gardens. It is inspired development of a standard all too rare in the Mediterranean. If you prefer going it alone

Full board here works out at around £1.75 per day.
One night in parlicular I recall at Houmt Souk, the leaves of the eucalyptus trees banging listlessly in the warm evening air, the smell of garlic, barking of dogs, wailing of Arah music from cafe radios. As the moon rode into the darkening sky it cast a curious, pale suffused light over the town in which the white domes and flat-roofed houses assumed the colours of rose and lavender, the open doorways and windows picked out in deeper shadow.

We ate at a gargotte, an Arah eating house, feasting on fried sea-bream drencbed in lemon juice, while under the table a refugre column of tabby cats and kittens' purred and prowled around our legs in an ecstasy of

MOTORING

THIS is the Scrambler dning its thing on laud and water. It comes from the States and looks like a Walt Disney creation. In foct it is very practical. It has a glass fibre body shell on six sturdy wieel: end it climbs, steims, ploughs through bogs, and scranhles over logs and through snowdrifts.

In America it has cought on largely os a "jun" tenicle but the importers of the Scrambler into Britaio believe it has a juture on jerms, building sites, river bonks, seashores, jorests and mershy land. The only snop is that currently it can't legally be driven on British public roads. The price raries between 1649 2771 depending on engine size, plus £33 for packing oud freight. Judith Jackson recently with the development by Ford of a completely new ultracar from being driven uoless the driver and passenger are wearing their seat belts properly. The Ford director of engineering responsible for the project says:

"People will go to almost any lengths to avoid wearing a seat belt. Even with an igoitinn-linked system they sit on them, wrap them around the seat god even cut the buckles off."

A new factor entered the field that road deaths had ed by 17 per cent in months that wearing months that wearing is been compulsory.

Sman for Britain's limits the belt across bis chest. in his seat. Then he has to buckle the belt across bis chest so that the buckle bounces back an ultra-sonie signal from a unit above the windscreen to complete the ignition circuit.

A TELEPHONE in your car used to be the ultimate in motoring one-upmanship but now it is hecoming positively common. Per-sonally I am extremely happy that my car is the one place where my thoughts cannot be interrupted by a telephone but I am clearly a member of a group which is dwindling rapidly, particularly in London and the Home Counties.

The full telephone service prorided only by the Post Office is, of course, still as exclusive as ever. It is available only in London and there are only 300 (you'll never get one). This is UGH !-- When it comes to styling. the thinking of the American motor industry completely desents me, writes Marwell Boyd. In the lote 1950s wost American cars looked like chrome-entrusted metol waterfolls—a riot of fins, curves and space-age styling cliches. Then the industry suddenly got the European message of clean, smart, shorp-edged lines. By the middle 1960s one of the smartest and best-proportioned cars of all icas General Motors' Buick Riviera.

But, in the consumer-orientated turned full circle.

sociely of pinnned obsolescence, they cannot be left nlone. Lines name change, if necessary for the worse. The picture shows what has happened to the Buick Riviera for 1972, unceiled the olher day. Curves and lines run in all dirertions and from the back the carlooks like on upturned, glassbottomed rowing boat set in a slob of concrete. Even the

the only system in which yntt can speak direct to the caller. But a new name-Carphoneshas joined firms like Air Call (national and growing fast) which can provide a radio telephone in your car. These work through a central bureau which passes un messages.

Carphones' equipment is, with the exception of the clumsy hand-set, very neat. It comes from ITT and has a Council of Industrial Design Award. The firm runs a two-level system: the oormal one tat £16 a month) and a selective one tat £21 a month) which lets through only those messages meant for the subscriber and eliminates other people's chatter.

MOST of its consider crises oo the road as something which happens to other peuple. Barely du we consider what we would have done had it happened to us So ponder on this:

On a dark and very wet night carlier this month, a friend, with his pregnant wife, was driving back to London in their Triumph Stag. They were in the centre lanc of the M4 with a stream of heavy lorries on their left and faster cars overtaking them on the right. They were travelling at about 50 mph when a sudden failure left them with no power and no electrics.

They had no brake lights, no indicators and no hazard warning lights. The electric windows were closed so they could not make hand signals. They could not indicate to the cars behind not indicate to the cars behind that they were stopping nor could they warn the lorry drivers that they were hopiog to coast as far as the hard shoulder.

What should they do? What they did was to open the doors slightly thus using the red reflectors on the door edge, and wave wildly out of them. What would you have done?

A complete office or study in one piece of furniture!

This is a genuine direct from factory offer—similar units sell for over £40

Nowadays, running a home can be as involved as running o business. Poying bills, calculating income and expenditure, dealing with income tax returns—bardly a day passes when othere's not some correspondence that needs attention. These jubs are so much simpler when all the information is of your fingertips. The Homo Office gives you a safe place to file away letters, receipts, insurance policies etc. and a comfortable place to work. When a man brings work home from the office the Home Office is so convenient. Children working for a xumientions can also make good use of the Home Office. It can transform a bedroom ar spare room into a complete study... even a hall or landing can be put to use.

form a bedroom it spare room toto e complete study... even a hair of making can be put to use.

The compact Hume Office infers so much—all in one piece of furniture. Fur a start you are provided with a generous alzed working surface. Open the right-hand door and there's a knee hole compartment allowing you to get close to your work and a useful recessed shelf. On the back of the door there are stationary/document racks and chips for pens, pencils, etc. Open the left-hand door and you've twn 19½ x 11½ shelves and a pull-oul tidy tray for paper-clips atc. Below these shelves there are 3 pigeon hale filing compartments 11½ deep x 6 wide x 13½ high to atore really large folders, files etc. On the left-hand door is an accessory tray—and a special frictino clip that firmly grips a cingle sheet or a whole bundle of papers.

The Hore Office is finished throughout to pollshed wood grain Saxonite-the satin smooth finish that never needs pollshing. The rop, doors, and sides are thished in Teak grained Saxonite. The interior is of Mahognoy grained Saxonite. Door handles are of solid Afro-Teak and finger-light magnetic door catches put the final touches to a handsome, versatile piece of furniture.

Send full cash price plus carriage (or carriage only for easy terms) Inspect the quality at your leisure and in your own home. We are convinced that the more you see of the varsatile Home Office, the more you will appreciate its value, good looks and the high standard of workmanship embodied in it. If however you should decide nut to purchase, you may return the Home Office to good condition within 14 days and we will return all muney paid.

WHAT a glorious lale summer we have had, with an added b unity from our gardens as flowering chrubs have been aperb and annuals have revelled in the sunny, warm conditions. Sweet corn has thrived, maturing in gardeos where before the seas in has often proved not grite long enough, and herbs like sweet sun-bine This weekend a few spikes of tuberoses have filled the house with scent. The spikes of heavytextured, pearly-white flowers, so beautiful in themselves, although rather ungainly in growth, are worth all the attendant risks. lient and sanshine they must have. In fact, they are best grown in pots under glass or sheltered in a warm sunny frame. There is a lot of fragrance in cardens at this season. White tuhacco (Nicotiona offinis) is one of the best. Alas, in London it has been badly attacked by leaf minors during the past two sea-sins, 'The lovely 'Lime Green' infortunately lacks the rich fragrance, Night-scented stock is a must, although no one would plant it for its flowers. The commnn evening primrose with luminous clear yellow flowers (Ocnobicera biennis) is another delight. It seeds freely and odd plants should be allowed to grow plants should be allowed to grow where they do no harm.

Of the many boneysuckles the common Lonicera japonica heliana, with its unending succession of flowers, white agoing to cream, exuding rich fragrance especially in the evening and early morning, is essential, Plant it near the door, on the wall of the terrace where you sit, or trap it in the sheltered corner by your swimming pool, if you have one. Jasminum officinale gives another bounteous crop of fragrant white flowers and is not particular over where it grows. Another marvellous climber with pervasive fragrance is Trathelospermuni jasminoides, a ather tender evergreen climber that needs a sunny wall and a mild climate.

What can equal the rich lemon fragrance of the evergreen Mag-nolia grandiflora? The buge cupshaped flowers are so effective among the dark gleaming leaves, packed by tawny brown felt. Give this tree a warm sheltered wall that goes up several storeys with plenty of space at the sides. Don't crowd it between windows on a narrow slit of wall. In mild areas plant it in the open in a sheltered spot.
Also in flower now are the lilyscented Clereodendrons, C. for-gesii and trichotomum, with their torquoise centres and red calyx cups. These are indispensable late-flowering ahrubs nr small trees. They are prone to throw up a mass of suckers, especially if the gravel.

Common scents planted in horders or shrubberies where the roots are disturbed. I when digging or planting Rear by, basit have grown as if in Italian when digging or planting hear by, suckers spring up and these quickly make new plants.

Two lilies are in full flower. These are the golden banded aurainms with huge while flowers, flecked with yellow and hrown. There are many variations, as dozens of hybrids have been made, some heavily banded with red or suffused with pink, with red or suffused with pink, but for me the species Lilium curatum planachalium cannot be improved. Note, however, that this lily and its progeny are lime-haters, and if your soil is at all alkaline they should be grown in pots. As the flowers are so large, plant them one 10 a pot and not in threes.

Lilium specierum is the other fragrant freasure with its exquisite flowers that change shape as they open, first flat and smooth and then reflexed, ruffled and so exolic that friends always ask if they are orchids. The suffusion of pink and the reddish spots make them even more intriguing. There are many fine forms, in-

SUNDAY TIMES

AUTUMN leavesstricken multitudes," as the poet called them—and raking them up is a job that many people avoid like the plague. Leaf sweepers are, of course, the answer-quicker, easier and cleaner than the old birch broom and barrow. In this Sunday Times Special Offer, we have made sure we have a machine (pictured) that has an efficient "pick-up" on grass, gravel and smooth tarmac, a 24in, width to cover the ground quickly, and, with women, the elderly and handicapped in mind, is much easier to push than other similar devices.

In this improved Mk. 11 version of the Valur "Sweepmaster," which was extremely successful when specially offered in The Times last year, the brushes—instead of being straight and the provided of the provided received th parallel nn the spindle, meeting the debris "head on "-are spiralled like those m a carpet sweeper. As a result the Sweepmaster is very easy to move along.

It will also pick up grass cuttings from a rotary mower, worm casts, pine needles—and leaves off casts, pine needles—and leaves off a gravel path without picking up L. speciosum olbum. A these are lime-haters and best grown in pots. I find that as the flowers open the leaves are apt to turn yellow, so don't be surprised if this happens to yours. For fragrance they are very rewording.

Heliotrope (Cherry Pie) another indispensable source of fragrance in the summer garden. I love to grow it with silver foliage such as santolinas, Stochys langto 'Silver Carpet' or, best of all, for large tuhs and boxes, Helichrysum petiolatum, one of the most beautiful of all the greys with its spreading, rather pendulous growths which drape the sides with silver. It grows with incredible speed, covering large areas in a few weeks. It is definitely teoder, although plants dld come through the last wioter in several gardens I know in Snffolk, Sussex and Donegal. Not all the best smells come from flowers. Rosemary, thyme, mints, lavenders, belichtysums, sage, origanum and all the other aromatics, exude their fragrance as we brush against them or crush the leaves. To this group belong the scented-leaved geraniums in wide variety, lemon verbena (Lippio citriodora), lemon balm and the various monardas.

Then there are trees and shrubs. Some of the cistuces give off a rich incense fragrance, parti-cularly Cistus ladaniferus, reminiscent of walks on the rocky slopes along the Mediterranean shores. Bay trees have a clean fresh fragrance, and the various eucalyoti are almost as varied as the scented geraniums. Junipers such as tamariscifolia and pfitzerinna are very rewarding, especially when warm in the sun. Figs. whether they fruit or not are worth growing for the hand-some foliage and the strange exotic fragrance that calls up memories of holidays on islands in the sca. Some rhododendrons have aromatic foliage and add pleasure to the ericaceous gardeo, especially when flowering bas

If possible, gardeners should attend the Great Autumn Show at the Royal Horticultural Society's Halls in Vigrent Square, London on Tuesday (11 a.m.-8 p.m.), Wednesday (10 a.m.p.m.) and on Thursday (10 a.m.-

Social Statisticians to study factors that make life worth living.

Here are two of several interesting vacancies in the Government Statistical Service.

The Social Survey Division of the Office of Populanon Censuses and Surveys is the organisation that conducts surveys into people's circumstances and attitudes that bear on a wide range of social and economic problems. Some recent studies have been in the field of education, labour relations, housing, demography, criminology and social administration. You will work with the research and technical hranches of the Division. You will need a keen interest in current sampling theory, and should have some specialised knowledge of multivariate analysis.

The Central Statistical Office post is concerned with the development of social statistics and in particular, with the development of statistical indicators. Much of your work will be to identify the fundamental aspects of living as far as the normal individual is concerned, then to isolate these aspects and define them quantitatively, to present at any given time a balanced picture of the state of society in relation to the social policies being pursued. You will need a background of experience in practical statistics combined with a keen interest in social affairs.

The starting salary (Inner London) could be above the minimum of the scale £3,425-£4,575. The posts are graded Statistician and there are prospects of promotion to Chief Statistician £5,175-£6,475.

Academic qualifications of applicants, who should normally be aged at least 28, will probably include an honours degree in statistics, or in another subject involving formal training in statistics. Several years' relevant experience is essential. Appointment may be permanent and pensionable or on a short-term basis

There are vacancies for Statisticians and Senior Assistant Statisticians in other Government Departments.
For full details of acceptable qualifications, together with details of current vacancies in the Government Statistical Service, and for an application form, write to the Civil Service Commission, Alencon Link, Basingstoke, Hants. or telephone Basingstoke 29222 Ext. 500 or London 01-839 1696 (24 hour 'Ansafone' service) quoting reference A/619/15 Closing date 8 October 1971.

"BUDGE" ROGERS and his England team should find at least one thing to their taste when they arrive in Tokyo today for their thrae weeks tour of the Far East. Yesterday I walked over the playing surface of the Chichibu Stadium, where they play their first match, against Waseda University Past and Present on Tuesday, and am able to pronounce it perfect.

There is a good coating of green grass, the ground is not too hard underfoot, and the whole appearance of the stadium is what one would expect at a major venue anywhere else in the world. Also the temperature, around 70, is nono too had. As the second international against Japan is to be held in Tokyo on September 28, under floodlights, the England players should at least be happy about

A foreshortened in-goal area of only 15 yards might be a bit of a snag at times, but that also applies at Twickenbam, according to Mr "Shiggy" Konno, the accretary of the Japanese Rugby Umon, who says: "I paced it out myself, when I was over for the centenary congress." So England, in this case, can hardly complain. As to the ground at Osaka, where the first international takes place on Friday afternoon, we shall have to wait and see. bave to wait and see.

What is certain according to Mr Konno, who speaks perfect English is that the Tokyo inter-national should attract a capacity crowd of 25,000—"unless it rains, that is," he was careful to add. That, at prices of up to £2-50 for the best seats, amounts to a "gate" of £12,500, which may surprise some of the people who are constantly asking me: they really play rugby in Japan?"
The fact is that it is now played on a considerable scale through-team, which is without any of its Lions, may run up against quite a few sbocks. Altogether there are 1,800 clubs currently affiliated to the Japanese Rugby Union, at five guineas or so per time. Of these 200 are university or train-ing college clubs, 300 are "open" ing college clubs, 300 are "open" clubs, as we know them, 400 are business house clubs, with the balance made up of 800 high school clubs and 100 junior high achool clubs. What it amounts to is 900 senior clubs, by UK reckoning, and 900 schoola. But—and it is a biggish but—almost none of these clubs are able to put out more than one team.

"Our biggest difficulty is shortage of grounds," says "Shiggy" Konno, "consequently a club can have as many as 40 players, but have as many as 40 players, but be able to put out only one team. But the non-selected players train every bit as hard as the rest." He then made a statement which struck me as stagering.

"I have known cases of players going through four years at University as one of the rugby squad," he said, "and training regularly, but without ever getting a game. They always hope that the great day will come when they do get one."

This may give some idea of

when they do get one."

This may give some idea of how fanatically the Japanese approach their training for rugby, as for other games. I was told hy many New Zealanders while I was on the Lions' tour how remarkably fit the Japanese players were when they toured there in 1968. One former All Black went as far as to call them "tha most exciting rugby "tha most exciting rugby players I have ever seen, including the French." Perhaps he was boing a hit over-enthusiastic, but there is no doubt that the ing the French." Japanese styla of play makes them immensely attractive to watch.

It seems they make up for thair lack of inches, and avoir-dupois, scuttling round the field non-stop at an amazing pace; and moving the hall with basketball dexterity with the object of beating the man with the pass, or rather a series of passes, so that the defence at the end is outflanked.

On that 1968 tour of New Zealand they won half of their 10 matches, mostely against university sides, and scorad 193 points against 221. But their hig moment—one that shook all New Zealand and Scorad 198 moment—one that shook all New Zealand and Scorad 1988 moment—one that shook all New Zealand and Scorad 1988 moment—one that shook all New Zealand 1988 moment—one that show the second second 1988 moment 1988 mom Zealanders—came when they beat the Junior All Blacks at Wellington by 23-19.

That they deserved it seems obvious from the fact that they scored six tries to their opponents' three, and four of these came from a remarkable left wing, Yoshibiro Sakata, who is still talked of in bated breath by New Zealanders. In the previous match he had scored five tries against Poverty Bay, no mean province, so no one could say the Junior All Blacks had not been warned. Ho got his four tries against them just the same.

Altogether he got 14, even on such an attenuated tour. Sakata, now 28 and a junior manager with a raitway company, is still playing, very much so, and is one of the squad of 24 players from whom the Japanese team to play England will he selected. It will he a sensation if be is not included.

Physically the Japanese will be at a considerable disadvantage against England. Their forwards against England.

will average only 5ft 104m and 12st 7fb against their opponents 6ft 14in and 14st 12lb. Their tallest forward, lock Toshio Terai, is 6ft 2in, but weighs only 13st.

How, then, can they hope to win the line-onts? The answer is that they don't very often, but they do what they can by throw-ing in hard and fast to shortened line-outs, where their timing, it seems, is often superb; and they vary this, from time to time, by throwing the ball over the top.

Still, if the likes of Chris Ralston and Peter Larter cannot win the hall against this kind of opposi-tion, there will be something radically wrong. It all promises to be a highly stimulating rugby experience, and the Japanese are immonsely and the Japanese are immonsely thrilled at being given the opportunity to pit themselves against a full-scale international side at last. They have had to wait a long time for it. The first recorded match in Japan took place in 1890, between Keio University and Yokohams Country and Athletic Club. Yet people ask:

"Do they really play rugby?" The try, incidentally, will count as four points on this tour. With Sakata in the offing, that could cost England dear. Especially if the new-found ogre of touring teams, circadian dys-rhythmia, hits the side. It is asking something of playera to fly in on a Sunday, play their first match on the Tuesday and then engage in an international on the Friday, only five days after arrival. The Lions found as much against Queensland, back in May. Will nobody ever learn?

Budge Rogers is the big selling point on a Toky

Tour coach John Burgess supervises a stint on the scrummaging machine at Twickenham.

... and John Hopkins talks to the tourists' coach John Burges

AT 46, John Burgess puts in three hard, hour-long training sessions each week, running three miles each time and occationally pausing to do a set of abdominal exercises and press nps. Burgess has always trained and played hard. Even after be was dropped from the Lancasbire side in 1955, when he was 30, he continued to play for Broughton Park. His determination was rewarded nine years later when he was recalled to lead the Lancashire pack for two full seasons.

As assistant manager and coach to England's Far East touring party be expected similar dedica-tion from England's 23-strong when they gathered for their first training session in mid-summer. He had a lot of work to do in a short time and to begin with he shouted and swore at the players. He bullied them. He was particularly hard on anybody who made the rest of the group suffer out of selfishness. One suffer out of selfishness. One squad member called him a "Little Hitler."

But it got results and by the third and last session players understood what he was trying to do and he found he hardly needed to shont at all. The "Hitler" description hurt a little and he mused aloud how it would bave been comparatively easy to coach the Liens. "Carwyn Jamea bad three months. I had only three sessions." Burgess oozes confidence and good-natured Lancasbire bluster. Small, slight, he looks more the stand-off he was in his 20's than the fianker be became when be was 30. Inevitably he is being compared with Carwyn James.

Though the two bave some characteristics in common—they are both receptive to ideas for instance—thair characters are very different. James, an introvert, is tactful, a chain-smoker, a man who even in animated discussion rarely raises his voice and makes his presence felt by the strength of what he says. Burgess, though far from excitable, is talkative, blunt, a way-out extrovert and someone who lets his voice reflect his feelings, which often run

Burgess may yet follow James and become coach to a Lions side. So far he has successfully coached Broughton Park and Lancashire. But for the time being his reputation hangs on the success of England's Far East tour. He would like to think that success or failure will not alter the minds of the English selec-tors, either about the players or cosching methods that he and his colleagues are encourag-ing. "We are in a transitional stage," he says. "We are trying to establish a pattern of play. We are still ad libbing compared with Wales."

Burgess could take over as England's coach when Don White's term ends. In that case some of the players would find themselves doing unfamiliar routines. Burgess believes that to create better understanding among players every man on the field ought to be able to do every other man's job. In training sessions he has deliberately played lock Chris Ralston at stand-off. Nigel Starmer-Smith in the front row of the scrum instead of scrum-half, and be has deliber-ately taught every party member how to enter a ruck. It's a hit like Sir Alf Ramsey teaching Bobby Charlton how to play in goal.

"If play breaks down I expect the nearest man to go in and get the ball out from the ruck even if he is a threequarter," says Burgess, "In return I expect one of the forwards to realise this and go and take his threequarter line." Tha best two-year-old in Europe is probably Roberto, trained by Vincent O'Brien. Uobeaten in three races, Roberto recently won with the utmost ease the National Stakes at The Curragh, a race previously won by Santa Claus and Sir Ivor. He will next run in the

Roberto, like so many of the best horses trained in Europe today, was bred in America and is by Hail To Reason, who like Sir Ivor's sire Sir Gaylord, is a desceedant of that fine English sprinter Royal Charger. If Roberto does win the Derby in 1972, he will be the fourth American-bred

I trust the Derhy is not going to lapse into one of those sporting events lika tha Walker Cup in which Great Britain beats America once every 35 years and old men dissolve into tears when it occurs. Crowned Prince and Meadow Mint, both American-bred, could he up to classic standard next year, and at present I prefer Meadow Mint, whose one defeat was when his saddle slipped at York.

An English opponent for Roberto in tha Grand Criterium is our Mirage who last week achieved a considerable surprise in winning the £15,000 Prix de la Salamandre at Longchamp. Ha had run only ooce previously, winning a small race at Newmarket in which he was significantly hacked from 12-1 to 11-2. He is trained by Barrington Hills, who in double quick time

It is sometimes alleged that English owners and breeders, in respect of the sale of top-class respect of the sale of top-class horses for export, are actuated solely by self-loterest and havo as little concern for the future of the British thoroughbred as a rapaclous property developer bas for the countryside pockmarked by his loathsome buildings. It has, io fact, heen suggested that regulations should be introduced to restrict the export of top-class horses.

It is true that a few English owners and breeders are in the sport solely for what they can get out of it. The trouble, though, with those who wish to apply restrictions is that they are 50 yards out of date and harbour the weird illusion that the Union Jack still flutters from Duhlin Castle. The ties between English and Irish hloodstock breeding are close, but if restrictions were imposed over here, the Irish would not be under the slightest obligation to follow suit.

all his five Derby winners, as an English owner-breeder.

It is sometimes overlooked that if we lose at times through the export of good horses, this loss is counter-balanced by the import of others equally good. Immense benefit was derived from the import of horses like Nearco, Donatello II. Prince Chevaller and Chanteur II. Bols Foussel was champlon sire and leading sire of blood mares as well, while the American-bred Never Say Die was American-bred Never Say Die was champion sire. Good French horses recently imported include Relko, Reliance, Behistoun and Nelelus. It

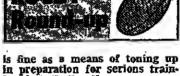

Reliance, Behistour and Nelelus. It is very rare to find a big winner in this country without imported blood close up in its pedigree.

The situation in France is very much more serious. In "An Analysis of the Present Decline of French Breeding" by Charles von Rykull in the British Racchorse, the position there is summed up as follows: "The main reason for tha present Fronch situation is now ovident. Racing and hreeding have passed out of the control of owner-breeders interested in this sport for love of horses and classic prestigo into the hands of commercial agents—be they owners, hreeders, trainers or dealers—whose interests are exclusively financial and aimed at rapid profits, which have hecome the only accopted measure of success, irrespective of the results on the future of the hreed itself."

by Michael Tennant

IF LIVERPOOL'S performance yesterday is anything to go by, the name is going to be on the lips of Rugby followers up and down the land by the middle of the season. Lelcester arrived at St. Michael's with a strong side, and a fairly even tussle seemed likely. Few can have reckoned on the Lancashire cluh's leading 18-3 at half-time and winning 18-8.

It was their fourth, successive winning 18-8.

It was their fourth successive victor, and was achieved by a brand of Rugby which must have impressed a chastened Leicester—and oversone otse who saw it.

Liverpool's dominance in the first half was remarkable. The heels were quick and clean. Bell, particularly, Rahilly and Murphy took charge of the lineouts and behind the scrum every back carried a thrustful punch which, coupled with excelent handling, must have heen as demoralising to Leicester as it was a joy to watch.

Beese scored two finetries. Hen-as demoralising to Leicester as it was a joy to watch.

Beese scored two finetries. Hennigan's kicks were on target and, though Leicester tightened their game perceptibly, they found Liverpool's defensive qualities almost as good as their attacking one.

The Midland side did manage one secondihalf try through B fine threequarter movement stemming from B scrum 40 yards out on the right. The ball was whipped out Liverpool-style; and Nicholla went over in the cornor; Bann's kicking, however, did not match his usefut work in the lineouts in the second half.

Liverpool opened the scoring in the fourth minute with some neathandling. From a scrum in Leicester's right cornor, Morris found Wigley with a loog pass, McGillicuddy linked well and there was Beese coming up on the outside to take the pass and streak to the corner Henningan converted.

Leicester might have scored a minute or so later, when Nicholts spurted down the right flank, beat his man but chose to pass rather wildly inside when be might have easily beaten the full-back and scored. Bann was short with a 40-yard peoalty shot, too, and it was Hennigan who drew blood again with his first penalty shot from 25 yards.

with his first penaity shot from 25 yards.

Leicester were not as well orientated as their opponents. Nevertheless, on one of the odd occasions when they did penetrate Liverpool's 25 in the first half Allen, from a scrum five yards out on the left, darted ovar for a blindside try.

After Hennigan had put over his secood penalty goal, Liverpool turned defence hrilliantly into attack. Brady scooped up Jones's midfield "grubber", weaved, transferred to Irving and the captain's pass gave Beese a cloar run for the line for his second try, which Hennigan converted.

In the moantime Bann had failed with an easy penalty sho,t and Nicholls had made another fine side-stopping run in midfield only to waste it with a poor pass.

Leicester's scrummaging, lineout work and handling improved hit, apart from Nichol's try, they did not make sny marked impact Liverpool: J. i. Rennicen T. McGullicuddy. V. Wieley. M. C. Beere, E. G. NEW BRIGHTON' second half revival surprised the faster Heriot's side on their first visit to Gotden Acre. If it had not been for Heriot's tremendous advantage in speed behind the scrum thoy could have been in trouble as the determined and often successful line-out play by the visiting forwards gave them a scrummage advantage. Pope and mith jumped well, but the Heriot rushes were woll disciplined. Clark, McLeod and Fisken being often to the fore.

Although short of a number of regulars including both halfbacks, New Brighton were the more dominating team at tho start, their forwards, with lusty kicks from Miles and Maxwell, keeping Heriot pinned into their own territory.

Americans come out fighting

AFTER yesterday's first round of fourhalls over the old Warson, St. Louis, the match seemed to be taking on a familiar pattern with the Americans, after a setback in the unfamiliar Scotch foursomes as they call them, coming to their senses and hitting back in the fourballs which are back in the fourballs which are, of course, the only normal form of goif in this country apart from the stroke play tournaments.

Sn unfamiliar indeed are four-somes that J. C. Snead, neplew of the Great Sam Snead, when partnered with Nicklaus in the afternoon said at the first hole, "You tell me if I do anything wrong, I've never played this game before." So yesterday morning the Americans starting one point behind came out fighting and won every one of the four matches, though three of them had at an early stage been one or two down.

Though admitting prejudice I do think fourball matches make dull watching, not only because two of them in a day will keep the players on the course for about to hours but because, with players as good as this, each hole resolves itself into a ques-tion of which side will hole the purt for a birdie.

John Garner got his first game in this series and kept his end up very well in partnership with Coles but no amount of determina-tion can at the moment make up for lack of hitting power and for lack of hitting power and it does look as though he will have to take a leaf out of Gary Player's earlier book and get down to a couple of years of setting-up exercises. Much was made of an incident when Gallacher's caddie calmly and openly asked Palmer's man what club he, Palmer, had taken on the short 7th. In since seeking advice from anyone else is foradvice from anyone else is for-hidden by the rules, the referee had no option but to disquality Gallacher's side from this bole. In matches like this there is no option but to stick precisely to the rules, though in the 1953 Walker Cup match the rules were cheerfully waived when one player was discovered to have by mistake an extra club in his bag. The rule in question was so mani-festly absurd that it was later

Another look at the rule whereby you cannot ask someone what club he took could also come under reconsideration. After all there is no harm in asking and anyway he cannot prevent your knowing since you have only to look in his bag and see which one is missing

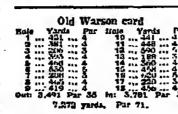

So the British started the after-noon three behind and it would have been a fairly blind patriot who could see on thing for the afternoon but a repetition of the morning. For a while, however, there were distinct rays of bope, plus one really sterling perform ance from Townsend and Banner-man against the truly formidable combination of Palmer and Nicklaus.

On hearing of this pairing one wag among the British supporters said, "looks like an early tea then." How wrong be was because between them the two young British players went out in 29 against 30 to be one up and so they remained until at the par four 14th Nicklaus got within three feet and holed the put to square. In the meantime Coster-huia at last got his reward for some consistently fine, but unprofitable play, by getting home with Gallacher against Trevino and Casper, a couple of notable seales for the pount players.

Jacklin and Huggett with a better hall of 33 kept their heads above weter for 12 holes but a couple of American birdies set them back and they could not recover. All square with one to play Townsend got a perfect four play Townsend got a perfect four nt the last in the gathering gloom hut Nicklaus having pitched up to within 12 feet holed a diabolical putt across the slope to win the match, he and Palmer against the British 65, a wonderful match. The measure of the British performance may be judged by the fact that Palmer and Nicklaus have only once in their lives lost a tournament, let alone a match when partnered together.

Finally in almost complete darkness Frank Beard holed from at least four feet to halve with Coles and O'Connor, who at one time had been four down and squared with four birdies in a row. Thus with 16 singles to come America led by 10 matches

On arrival here the first thing I found was that, contrary to my loformation last week, this vast city "the gateway to the West" is not pronounced as it was by its French founders but St. Lowes as in Sussex.

The course is a fairly recent creation by that Global American golf architect Robert Trent Jones and has the inevitable large sloping greens which are, how-ever, in wonderfol condition being mown three times a day. When Nicklans and Jackiin played a "national Golf Day" exhibition bere some months ago a member present told me that he never thought the course could be fit for the Eyder Cup but the greenkeeping staff have worked miracles and it looks to worked miracles and it idoes to me to be in excellent order for what has been described as the worst climate in the States, freezing in winter and baking hot in summer, as, for instance, two days before the match when the temperature was over 100.

A distinctive feature which is capable of indefinite expansion is capable of indefinite expansion is the Boeing charter flight by Caledonian BUA of members of the British Golf Supporters Association, together with the team. One young couple even turned up in Union Jack cloth-ing and we are always assured of a modest clione round every a modest clique round every green to applaud any British

Nothing is too much trouble for the people here to make us welcome and to make a success of the occasion even down to putting bowls of red, white and htme flowers on all the tables.

Also among the spectators are two of this years Cambridge team, Andrew Simpson and Julian Watson, who came over on a student charter flight 11 weeks ago and have been hitch hiding round the country. Simpson tells me he got right across to San Francisco, worked for a while in Woolworths, thence to a ranch in Texas, and so bere.

clin's 24-pour chagny race, which clarited a 2 pm yesterday.

The race began in bright sunlight with a light following South-West wind, on the Southport Marine Lake. The triangular course is about 1,600 metres long.

One hundred and fifty yacht and sailing clubs applied to enter this event, now in its fifth year, but it was over-subscribed et. Christoms, and the bosts found themselves having to aced the entries down to 90, one boat a club geing allowed. The boats involved are the International Enterprise class and the YWGP 14. The RYA Portsmouth yardstick figures are applied to the handicapa of the two classes, and the overall winner is the club whose entry averages the lowest lap time.

Apart from the major Southport Centenary Trophy, held by Bolton SC, there are numerous other prizes. For instance, the Midnight

Cup for the fastest complete lap timed between midnight last night and I am this morning.

The number of actual sailors compeding in this diaghy-racing jamooree is in no way restricted, except that only two may be sailing in any boat at any time. About 1,000 people will have had a sail by the time the race finishes at two o'clock this afternoon.

The whole competition has a o'clock this afternoon.

The whole competition has a festive air, and there is also an international aspect. Apart from kinghorn, from Fife, there are entries from Ireland, Wales and France, whose Parisian Club Nautique d'Enghien run a similar event, in which West Lancashire came third last year.

Down at Falmouth, five offshore racers started yeslerdny in the race to Gibraltar, which is being run jointly by the Royal Cornwall and the Royal Gibraltar VCs. These five should finish, and their crews qualify to take part in the Ocean Cruising Club rally, which is being held in Gabraltar on Tuesday week. The qualification for the OCC is 1,000 miles under sail non-stop.

There is a further race, from Gibraltar to Malta, acting as a "feeder" for the Royal Ocean Racing Club's Middle Sea event, which starts oo October 23.

It is o pity that the dollar crisis in the United States, together with the uncertain political climate in Malta, appears to have deterred several American boats from even considering going on the Mediterranean for the Middle Sea race, which is in its third year and bids fair to become one of the offshore racing classics.

The course takes the competitors from Malta round Pantellaria, Lampedusa and Sicily, back to Malta, about 630 miles. AT 2,30 p.m. tomorrow. Earl Moun atten of Burna will open the third Southampton Boat Show in the Mayflower Park. The space occupied is double that of last year;

A really pleasing feature of this exhibition is that a good number of vachts and boats are actually exhibited a0oat on Southampton Water. Those fortunate enough, and who are regarded as genuine customers, might even get them-selves a demonstration sail if the customers, might even get themselves e demonstration sail if the pressure is not too desperate.

ON THE CLYDE, this is Polaris weekend in the Holy Loch. The local sailing club are organising the racing, while USS Canopus, the Polaris submarine mother ship, is taking charge of social arrangements. This fixture, with one race today and two tomorrow has become a popular end-of-the-season part of the Clyde racing calendar. In the Solent, the Royal Southern YU's Hamble-Yarmouth-Hamble race started with the first leg to Yarmouth First boat bome was Sir Max Aitken's Crusade, followed by Arthur Slater's Prospect of Whithy and Ron Amey's Norsema VGX. This is the eighth race to count for the Solent points chamolonship, the points being awarded on the aggregate of the two legs.

A YEAR or so ago I was asked to write a book about Fred True-man. It would be a biography not only about a marvellous athlete but a complex and extraordinary character. It seemed like a good idea at the time, but it didn't work out. My idea was to live in Fred's back pocket for a couple of months and lard the inevitable catalogue of his sporting catalogue of bis sporting triumphs with an analysis of the real effect that international fame bad on a lad quarried from the South Yorkshire coalfield.

Unfortunately, my idea co-incided with Fred's notion that he bad a future as a music hall comedian. He took off for the comedian. He took on for the clubs, I got increasingly involved in other things and eventually, being basically a decent fellow, returned my advance to the pub-

I was made less sorrowful by my failure to write the book (and my decision to return the advance) when I learned that John Arlott had taken the job. John Arlott has long been my favourite cricket writer, the Tom Graveoey of cricket literature, technique and soul. We dined together on a couple of occasions after be bad been commissioned to do the book and discussed lines of enpresch and discussed lines of approach. I wanted an intimate (I cannot think of a better word) book about Fred, John bad decided on a critical assessment based on memory, statistics and his own grest knowledge sod love for both Fred and the game be adorned. Apart from a basic disagreement in approach we also differed in one other crucial respect—John wrote the book and I didn't. It is called Fred, Fortrait of a Fast Bowler (pub-Hisbed by Eyre and Spottiswoode, Oct.) and I read it this week at a sitting which is the best and the worst I can say about it. The best is splendid.

Not that the presence of child-ren is an unmixed blessing. I ren is an unmixed blessing. I shall not easily forget seeing a player belped into the pavilion after being kicked in what is euphemistically referred to as "the pit of the stomach." As be stumbled through the door, belped by two apectators, his five-year-old child ran forward shrieking with glee at seeing his parent and butted him smartly in the seat of the injury. The child could not understand why his father suddenly sank to the floor with a low moan.

with a low moan. Saturday nights is the Interested Woman's greatest ordeal. She will be woken up about midnight by the crasb of a car hitting the garage doors and voices call-ing loudly: "Sbush everyone." Then follows the aound of beavy footsteps downstairs, the clink of glass and the swish of a soda sypbon, the contents of which she well knows are going mostly over the carpet.

About 3 am there is s renewed outhreak of bedlam as the guests depart. Heavy hreathing is heard outside the bedroom door as the bushand passes by, eoters the wrong bedroom, and prob-ably goes to sleep on the floor. The condition of a player's kit gives a clue to the character of his woman. If it is immaculate, she is Interested; if it's clean but crumpled she'a tolerant but Not Interested; and if it looks exactly the same as when he left the the same as when be left the field the previous week then she'a one of the Don't-You-Dare-Come-Home - Again - In - That - State brigade.

Players without a woman at all are in a sorry plight over their kit. Many of them just wear it week after week without washing, until eventually it gives off a terrihle stale stench when the bag is unzipped, and is so thick with mud it's like playing in a plaster cast. At this stage the whole lot may be thrown away and a new strip purchased. Attempts to wash it in a laundromat merely blocks the drains, and I write as one who put a whole battery of machines out of action at the local Bendix. Possibly the fact that I put my hoots in as well might bave had something to do with it.

On the other band, inexperienced girl friends are not always to be trusted with a player's kit. I knew one who embroidered the I knew one woo emoroidered the player's name on the cbest of bis jersey in pink wool and was beartbroken when he savagely tore it off in the middle of a game.

But the the strangest experience was that of a friend whose girl wasbed his kit one cold Saturday morning in February and bung it on the line to dry. When be rusbed in to collect it just before the game it was frozen solid. It was the only time I bave ever seen a player arrive and stand his jersey in the corner of the dressing-room.

ONE EXPERIENCE of staging a game between the English and Freoch Rugby League champions has been enough for St Helens. They have called off the match, booked for October 23, against present French champions St Esteve.

St. Helens, League champions for St. Helens, League champions for the past two seasons, say they have failed to get a satisfactory assurance from the French chub that they would turn out a team good enough to offer a serious challenge. This must rate as the understatement of the season.

The sad truth is that St. Helens, or the Rugby League for that matter, simply cannot afford another French farce.

other French farce.

The first of thesemeetings for what was billed as the official championship of Europe was at Knowsley Road, last June, when Saints ran up a 62-0 win against St Gauden, it all looked good from the advance publicity. It turned out thata St Helens and their supporters had been unwittingly "conned" into paying for a wretchedly poor opposition.

The French team were in dire trouble with the fans for their poor showing. They were in trouble with the St Helens ciub, justifiably annoyed that they had sponsored this flop. They were in worse trouble with the licensee of the hotel where they had a short but bectic stay. She complained about borseolay and bad manners, early morning disturbances and certainly St Gauden played as if they had not recovered from a good night out.

Castleford, facine up to the inevitable fact that scrum-balf Keith Hepworth would not play for them again, bave transfer-listed him at £7,000. It is a measure of how the fortunes of Hepworth bave sunk in the last 15 months that Castleford would be lucky to get much above balf this foe.

From the high-water mark of the Anstralian tour in 1970, Hepworth has had an unhappy time. He made such a poor showing in the World Cun series that be lost his place to Steve Nash, the lively Featherstone balf-back, and at club level things have never been the same since the famous partnership with Alan Hardisty—now with Leeds—was broken.

Thompson netting Oxford's
second two minutes later.

Miliwali moved into second place by virtuo of a 2-2 draw ngainst Luton, who were twice behind. Both their goals were scored by Peter Anderson. Another surprise was Blackpool's 1-0 defeat against lowly Watford. Keith Eddy grabbed the decisive goal in the 60th minute.

This has not been Hull City's week. Quite apart from the transfer speculation surrounding striker Ken Wagstaffe, City were a shade unfortunate to be beaten 3-1 by Portsmouth. In the 70th minute, player-manager Terry Nelli had to go off for attention to 2 head inqury, and when he returned four minutes later, his side were 3-0 down.

Sheffield Wednesday recorded their first victory of the season at Sunderland's expense, thanks to an inspired second-half spell which brought three goals in 20 minutes through Push, Joicey and Notts County are still on top of the Third Division after a 1-1 draw at Brighton, but now have to share that distinction with Bonraemouth, who have the same number of points after their 3-1 win at Wrexham. One of the best performances in Division IV was Brentford's 5-1 hammering of Peterborough. Ironically, before the match, the London cinb's chairman, Derek Hadley-Smith, defended their decision to sell striker Roger Cross to Fulham

In the Scottish First Division, Celtic and Hibernian are level on points 2t the top with Aberdeen and Ayr breathing down their necks just one point behind. Celtie beat Morton 3-I, while their Glasgow neighbours, Rangers, who have not made the best of starts to the scason, won 3-0 at Falkirk.

A new Everton

by Vincent Hanna

IT didn't seem like Liverpool at The crowd outside Goodison Park meandered peacefully in the sunshine displaying little interest in the proceedings. Taking one's seat in an eerie silence is not what one expects when Everton play at home but that is what comes of conceding seven goals in eight matches.

This game began as apathetically as the crowd applauded. Everton fielded a team shorn of five established players. No one expected them to give Arsenal much of a fight. But predictions are foolish with only eight games played and the young home team leaped at the champions from the first second.

Within 10 minutes they had created three scoring chances cone better than the near miss of Alan Whittle, set up by Henry Newton after seven minutes.

Arsenal started with their new formation and one which I believe is their best—with McLantock playing in midfield as distributor in front of Simpson and Roberts. His presence, while it insted, added a touch of style to the Arsenal team, And It's not often nne expects to say that.

Ru McLintock played for only 13 minutes He injured his ankle in an early clash with Whittle on the right wing and was replaced in midfield by Eddle Kelly. Perhaps his injury caused the first goal. It was not strictly his fault, but it was not strictly his fault, but it came from an appellipt defeative. came from an appalling defensive error in the centre.

After 13 minutes a flurry of tackles on tse right allowed young Bill Kenny, playing his third game for Everton to find Henry Newton in an open space. Newton bit a fethargic sort of centre which should have been cleared by Roberts Instead, the Arsenal No. 6 wafted tha ball on to the bead

This time is long ball from Whittle slanted down the centre of Arsenal's pensity area. Roberts miskleked borrifically again, presenting a gift this time to Royle. little too effectively.

In still didn't seem right that Everton should have a two-goal lead and no one seemed to object very much when they conceded an own goal in the 44th minote. First, the Everton back four tried a half-hearted off-side trao which missired and let Kennedy clear for the first time. Kennedy performed several contortions to get the ball on to his left foot and bit a firm shot into the goal mouth. It beat Gordon West and John Hurst obligingly chested it in.

The second-half was an exciting chested it in.

The second-half was an exciting encounter with Arsenal attacking in a more comprehensive fashion. They switched in a 424 formation bringing Graham np as a striker alongside Radford and Kennedy. He was quite effectiv and was unlucky not to score after 77 minutes when he headed a free-kick from Rice fiercely under the bar, only to see West scramble it out. Radford missed a sitter in the 74th minute from four yards when he roked the ball tamely to West's hands.

Sheffield were all the things everyone has been saying about them since their rebirth a month ago. They are fuid, skilled and fast. They are tough too. Andbeing new challengers to football's power bloc? they can stir the emotions and, even nn a day as lovely as fhis. warm the blood.

For all their virtues as a team, Currie is the boy. Surely no creative attacking player can be commanding the park quite as easily and arrogantly as he is at the moment. He roils the ball on bis instep, twists his body round it, flows a few yards and then looks round to take stock.

If this Sheffield ade has a faulti, it is that they are Currie-conscious. Often, when there is time, the man on the ball will look to Currie who will say "keep" or "give." It must be tempting to play on someone so much on the top of his form, but what about Salmons—un alouch at the soft-shoe sheuffle and the filt past?

Only Hockey, even better endowed with hair, can malch Currie's charisma on the field and with the supporters. He shouts and gesticulates in mid-field with his beadmand making him look every inche Bramall Lane's Messiah. He sets much store by that headhand hut it didn't seem to worry him when he lost it mid-way through the first half. The immediate result was a neat scissors kick which Shilton had to push over the bar.

Leicester's main offering against this was Manley's sharpness in defeoce, Fern's bard running down the wing and frequent signs of Sammels' undoubted class. Sheffield might well bave roasted the old firm of Sjoberg and Cross, who were sweating in tandem at the back, bad it not been for Manley's cover-had it not been for Manley's covering.

Two through balls early in the match both looked accurate enough to produce a goal untill Manley nipped in. Each time Currie was the lostigator and each time Woodward's deceptive acceleration looked like lelling until Manley arrived.

Fern's runs down the right, which started as early as the third minute, always threatened to be decisive but oever quite were. This left Sammels' shotting as Leicester's most constant method of assault.

Sammels started early and kept thumping away until the dving minutes. It was a good idea. United are vulnerable oo' so much in the penalty area—aithough they doo't like the high hall back from the byeling. who does?—but just outside because Currie, Salmons and Hockey have not yef developed the art of being everywhere at once. There is an empty channel, which Sammels tried to exploit.

His -rst effort was his best. It curled nastily for Hope from 25 yards and went a foot outside. The pext went outside the ground and the one after that almost followed. On better days Sammels will stick one in, and his promptings from the deep—he was practically bolding with Shilton haft the time—will deep—he was practically bolding with Shilton haft the time—will provoke more of a response. POOLS FORECAST

THIS WAS the last run out for the tourists before the first Test, at Salford an Saturday, and a depressing result it turned out. This was their fourth defeat of the tour—matches all at club level so far—and there is much for manager Jack Williams in do, with not more than a week in which to make an improvement.

hTe Kiwis were unlacky to lose by a margin of 11 points. They held Warrington to a two points each draw for the best part of an bour. But the trouble, in context of the first Test, is that this team, although improving in defence, is showing so little in the way nf skilled or sophisticated work in attack which will have any vhance of breaking down the Great Britain cover.

Hard work, and the New Zea-Hard work, and the New Zealanders show pienty of that, is commeodable but when in possession so much of their work—as at Warrington—is orthodox and the finishing is by no means decisive enough.

The New Zealand pack worked well and there was a flurry of good forward work from Smith, Deacon and Robin Orchard but it was never and Robin Orchard but it was never sustained iong enough and so rarely was it taken up by the backs. One problem for the tourists will be their scrumhalf Stirling, ooe of the few successes in the back line, who retired with a leg injury 12 minutes from time.

It is to be boped that the forecast from the New Zealand camp that he will be fit fur the first Test proves accurate.

With a week to go, manager Williams must call up his back line for special training and to introduce into that training some unorthodox and defence breaking tactics. They have been over here long enough now to vave picked up a few wrinkles. They certainly should have done from the Warrington gam and the excellent showing of that experienced campaigner and captain Murphy.

This, broadly, was too cool the game down to their own pace and preference. Their colling is nothing like so high as Manebester's but the home attack was a thing of fits, starts and occasional individual virtuosity.

Ironically, it was West Ham themselves who let the Mancunian geniout of the bottle after 18 minutes in which they more than held their own. Then, McDowell crossed from the right, Clyde Best—brutally jeered by the Stretford End, go his bead to it but Stepoey saved comfortably. Away went Manchester, Morgan crossed, Law turned the ball back and George Best hit a blazing shot which Ferguson turned spiendidly over the bar.

RADIO AMATEURS don't like the term Ham, whose origins are obscure, and they positively wince when you use the expression Hamfest to describe a gathering of hams. So it should be a source of acute emharrassment to them that one THE ONI of their most celebrated members is actually called Ham. But R. Ham of Faraday House, Storrington, Sussex, accepts the co-incidence with boisterous joy, "Marvelious," he says, He is hy way of being a ham aristocrat since be is a radio astronomer. He listens only to abstract sounds from the galaxies.

The only human activity he admits to listening in to is cricket.

To try to "work" a star would approximate to a form of hamnecropholia, since by the time-the sound reaches us the star has heen dead about a million years. But with the aid of his XYL and his aerial telescope he daily records the storms and noises of our most important living star, the sun.

IN AUGUST last year a radio ham in Alaska was involved in a hizarre murder drama when he picked up a distress signal from an ice-fice 900 miles away. It was footing status and the second was a second floating station T3 manned by American scientists. The negro station leader had heen shot. A Mexican was later charged with murder after a judge took weeks to decide whether the floe could in fact be held to be the legal equivalent of an American ship and so American territory.

BRIAN RIX the comedian, was the youngest person ever to get a radio licence. It was before the war and he was 12 at the time. He was only allowed an A (for artificial Berial) licence which meant he could only work it within the confines of his own house. So he used to have radio talks with his hrother unstairs. He often signs hrother upstairs. He often signs off "88," meaning love and kisses instead of "73"—yours sincerely. "But with my theatre work I rarely operate nowadays, saya G2DRU (Rix).

BELFAST RUC HQ and Military Operations Belfast have built up an enormous listening audience since locals discovered a few weeks ago that by merely adjusting one screw inside the receiver of an ordinary transistor they could tune into military conversations. PRINCE PHILIP is patron of the RSGB, although he is not a ham. King Hussein is a ham and during the civil war. in Jordan last year held a much-publicised conversation with a British ham G3NMR (Mr Laurie Margolis, a 20-year-old London University student). But the RSGB was not impres Contact between Jordan and Britain is a hanal achievement within the scope of any ham, and in addition they disapprove on grounds of fair play. In practice radio hams are hanned in Jordan, and, as a RSGB spokesman put it delicately: "The King was operat-ing illegally hut with relative certainty that be would not run the risk of sanctions from the known to have attempted to impose the radio ham's preoccupation with pure aound on a nation as a whole was Radio Eireann in the Fifties. They used to have regular programmes in which Mr Rory O'Connor gave exhibitions of tap dancing. On a good night you could also hear his medals clinking.

Wonderful Copenhagen

IMPROVEMENT

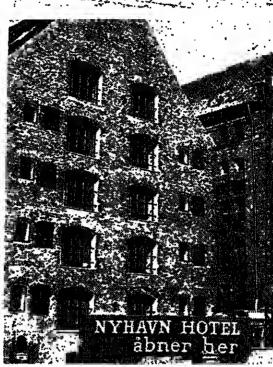

GOING ABROAD these days it is impossible not to be environment-conscious. BRIAN JACKMAN went to Denmark to write a travel article for The Sunday Times Compass page but came back with these examples of how the Danes are playing the convictional travel are playing the environment game in Copenhage

GRAABRODRETORY is one of the prettiest, most GRAABRODRETORV is one of the prettiest, most peaceful squares in the whole of Copenhagen. Gracious 18th-century houses painted dove grey, ice green, ochre, oxblood red, nod at each other across the cohbles. There are a few open-air tables where you can sit with a mid-morning Tuhorg, and in the centre, a aingle giant plane tree. Not a jarring note—until the fountain (right) appeared this year. Stark, uncompromising and totally irrelevant in such a setting, it stands like some monstrous triple-decker sandwich, the top slice curling np as if it has gone stale. People protested. Students poured soap powder over it. It just goes to show that not even the design-conscious Danes get it right every time.

COPENHAGEN'S answer to the town v. traffic prob-lem is the Stroget. This mile-long thoroughfare dog-legging its way through the city from Readdog-legging its way through the city from Readhuspladsen, the main square, is the longest pedestrian shopping precinct in Europe. Precinct is much too clinical a word for such a fun place as the Stroget, which is really four streets—Frederiks-berggade, Nygade, Amagertory and Ostergade—rolled into one. As soon as the traffic stopped, shoppers and tourists poured in. Boutiques sprang up. Pavement cafes aprouted. Even-one or two porn-shops have appeared. The result is a rich mixture of haute couture and hippy styles. A couple of more conventional shops are threatening to pull out, saying they have lost money since the cars stopped coming. But these are the only casualties in an otherwise highly popular revolution. Are you listening, Bond Street?

SUHR'S WAREHOUSE bas mellow brick walls steeply-raked pantiled roof, and was huilt in 1804. It stands where Nyhavn's canal-side street of discos, It stands where Nyhavn's canal-side street of discos, dives and tattooists' shops debouches into the harbour and the hydrofoils depart for Sweden. Two years ago it was a working warehouse. This month it opened as a hotel called the 71 Nyhavn. Conversion cost around £670,000—a better proposition than putting np a concrete slab—and the exterior of what is a scheduled huilding is preserved to the last hrick. Inside it is stunningly simple; whiteless the standard walls showing off the original massive washed walls showing off the original massive beams of Pomeranian pine to perfection. If only someome visualised the same for our Thames-side warehouses. With hotel beds at a premium in London, what could he more natural than to convert a huilding used for storing sacks into a place for storing people?

It was not way of life calculated increase either respect for the law or hatred of crime. The whole thing appeared like an elahorate game, with more or less interchangeable sides, and equal chance of success whether vone drew black or white. Accusations of hribery and corruntion, violence and blackmail, were freely made, and countered with a grin. It true they did not seem to be resented. If untrue, they were not worth denying. The rewards and strains, the solen-dours and miseries, did not differ much whatever side of the fence.

IN THE 21 years since then, at least in the arts, the attitude to criminals and police has polarised. Novels and hiographies by ex-convicts have proved popular, money-sninning and even endear-ing — the Behan-Norman-Genet syndrome. Though Dixon of Dock Green still sells the Image of the decent, fatherly, neighhourhood bohby, the Z-Cars series presents the police as ruthless, ambitious and tough, paratroopers locked in and endless guerrilla war with the suhversive sappers of civilisation as we know it. Even the secret conscienceless professional elim-inator, has been glamorised in James Bond, and de-mytho-logised in Callan. It is Big Buslness versus the State Machine, a running match fought aside the usual courtesies and hypocrisies of over-ground daily life, with no holds harred, and no rules observed. The means justifies the end—what else would justify

Now insure yourself for life.

"I'm better off dead!" he laughed. There are those of us who mean it. And those of us who don't.

Those who mean it are the ones who have covered their families with straight life insurance. And they're happy about it. Those who don't mean it are the ones who have gone one better. They know about Friends' Life standard rate of tax that should be very interesting indeed! In fact, we bet you'd be hard put to it to find something more rewarding. If our bonuses go on at the present rate, a Friends' Life Savings policy would double your savings well inside the next 20 years. That should keep you well ahead of inflation!

Savings—a type of life insurance that's a highly profitable form of savings.

Friends' Life Savings is a way of earning up to 143% gross interest per annum by regular savings.

There are two important Friends' Life Savings plans: The Longer-Term Savings Plan (the "best with-profits policy in 25 years" says a leading insurance broker); and The Ten-Year Savings Plan. Both the kind of life insurance that makes life insurance worth living for.
